WRECK KILLS FOUR

TRAINMEN DIE WHEN TRIPLE COLLISION OCCURS ON SIDING

Fog Blamed When Engineer Fails To Notice Signals

ABERDEEN, Md., Jan. 18.—Wrecking crews worked hastily today to clear away debris left by a double train wreck in which four Pennsylvania trainmen were killed and two more seriously scalded by steam.

The wreck occurred last night two miles south of here when a northbound passenger train crashed into the rear end of a freight train moving onto a siding.

Hardly had the reverberation of the first collision been silenced when a third train, a southbound passenger train, plowed into the wreckage of the freight, tossed onto the southbound right of way by the first crash. Those killed were:

K. A. Klein, brakeman of the freight train.

V. W. Stewart, freight train flagman.

A. C. Terhune, engineer of the southbound passenger train.

T. J. Kavanaugh, fireman of the southbound passenger train.

None of the passengers was seriously injured. Many were slightly cut or bruised when tossed about in the swaying coaches.

The two trainmen scalded were Leon Sweeting, engineer of the northbound passenger train, and John Lee, his fireman. Sweeting's condition is critical.

Failure of Terhune to see a signal set against him because of the heavy fog was believed to have caused the accident.

As soon as it was possible, relief trains were organized and the survivors taken into Washington and Baltimore.

The caboose of the freight and three of the cars were wrecked completely. The engine of the passenger train rammed onto its beam ends and toppled over into the ditch. The sudden stopping threw most of the following coaches into the adjoining field.

Miraculously, the coaches of the southbound train were not uncoupled and all but the first stayed on the rails. It was this happening, combined with the fact that the coaches of the northbound passenger train were tossed in the opposite direction to the southbound right of way that explains the fortunate escape of all passengers.

Officials said an immediate investigation would be started to determine the cause of the wreck.

AL SMITH ELECTED DIRECTOR OF BANK

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Alfred E. Smith, former governor of New York and Democratic presidential candidate in the last election has become a banker.

He has been elected to the Board of Directors of the County Trust Company, in which John J. Mackay, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and William F. Kennelly, a heavy contributor to Smith's campaign fund, also are directors.

It was said Smith would form no other business connections until his return from Florida about a month hence. Kennedy, Mackay and Smith will leave for Florida Sunday.

The County Trust Company opened in February, 1926, with Smith as the first depositor.

TWO BOYS BURN IN SHACK FIRE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18.—Two boys were burned beyond identification and two others died in a hospital from injuries received when a shack, which they had been using for a clubhouse, burned early today in a fire that destroyed the Scott-Powell dairy in West Philadelphia.

One of the dead boys was identified as Martin Lawless, 14, and the other was believed to be J. McCormack.

Firemen were unaware of the tragedy until they made a final inspection of the ruins just before leaving. Two of the boys were discovered badly burned but still alive. They died upon admission to a hospital.

It was believed the boys had been playing in the structure last night when it had fallen asleep.

MANY KILLED AS QUAKE ROCKS VENEZUELA CITY

CARACAS, Venezuela, Jan. 18.—Many were killed, a great number were injured, and almost all buildings were destroyed in Cumana by an earthquake which rocked the city yesterday, an official report received here from Gen. Jose Garbi, president of the state of Sucre, said today.

The dispatch did not give a definite estimate of the number of dead.

President Juan Vicente Gomez, of Venezuela, sent the steamer Guarico to Cumana with food and medicine.

The shocks began at 7:15 a. m. and lasted for ten minutes in Cumana, and dwelling houses and other buildings crumpled.

On Margarita Island forty miles from Cumana dispatches relayed by the Dutch steamer Commewijne, said the shocks were so violent as to make church bells ring. No casualties were reported from the island.

INFANT LIVES WHEN BORN AFTER MOTHER CLAIMED BY BULLET

Young Life Takes Place
Of Three In Shooting Case

STEUBENVILLE, O., Jan. 18.—The spark of life glowed brighter today in the little baby boy born in City Hospital here yesterday to Mrs. Frank Giannamore, just after the mother had died from wounds inflicted by her father-in-law, following a family dispute.

Reports from the hospital were that the child was "in good shape and cooing a little."

Doctors attending the baby said early today they were unable to give definite assurance that the child would live.

"If the child lives, medical science has won," Dr. V. B. Dilorata, the operating surgeon said.

"We knew as soon as the mother was brought to the hospital there was no possibility of saving her."

"There was a chance for the baby. We took that chance—and we have won," he said.

Frank Giannamore, father of the boy and whose own father, Vincenzo Giannamore, carried out the triple tragedy of killing Frank's wife, his own wife and himself, today was under care of physicians, recovering from a collapse suffered last night when told of the tragedy.

The infant's mother, Mrs. Frank Giannamore, 28, died as the result of a bullet fired into her back by her father-in-law, Vincenzo Giannamore, 64. A moment before he fatally wounded his wife, Mecheline, 55.

After shooting his wife and daughter-in-law, he turned the gun on himself and ended his own life.

It was believed a family dispute arose yesterday over conditions of Giannamore's will and in the anger which followed, the man shot the two women and then himself.

Both of the women were alive when neighbors rushed into the home. Mrs. Giannamore died at the hospital within an hour after the shooting.

Aware that the younger woman was about to become a mother, Mrs. C. W. Sams and V. B. Dilorata immediately made preparations to deliver the youngster safely. They held no hope for the mother.

A delicate operation was completed just as she died. Artificial respiration was employed on the seven and one half pound son which the mother was not permitted to live and see. In a short time he began to breathe and the physicians declare he has every chance of living.

Sons of the slayer revealed today that the elder Giannamore had worried over fancied attempts to "do me out of my property."

Twice he had been arrested on complaints of his wife, who said he had threatened to shoot her.

Arriving home late yesterday afternoon and seeing his wife and daughter-in-law talking, Giannamore pulled his gun and fired. It was said. The first bullet felled his wife. The younger woman attempted to flee and was shot in the back. Walking into another room the man pressed the gun against himself and pulled the trigger.

Bereft of father, mother and wife, the young husband was a pitiful figure.

ROCKEFELLER SENIOR IN FRAY WITH STEWART

Elder John D. Has Said
Indiana Man Must Be Ousted

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—The call of battle was reported here today to have drawn John D. Rockefeller, Sr., into the fray between his son and Col. Robert Stewart, of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

The story went in Wall Street that the aged and retired oil king had rallied sharply to his son's support in the latter's effort to unseat Stewart as chairman of the Indiana board of directors.

The elder Rockefeller, now on his annual holidays in Florida, was said to have passed the word to his friends and associates here that Stewart must be beaten.

Stewart, meantime was speeding here on the Twentieth Century Limited, apparently on company business the nature of which was not revealed. But Wall Street, its imagination fired by this picture, "Battle of the Oil Giants," visioned his dash eastward as linked clearly with the proxy struggle to be fought at the Indiana annual meeting in March.

The street harked back to the days when Rockefeller, Sr., was wielding the Standard Oil concern into the greatest unit of its kind in the country. Then in his prime, Rockefeller gave and asked no quarter, they said, and many believed he would prove a dangerous adversary now.

The Rockefeller millions talk loudly in high places in the financial world.

Stewart had suffered one significant blow in the past twenty-four hours, for alien property custodian Howard Sutherland at Washington announced he had turned over proxies of a block of confiscated German stock of the Indiana Company to be voted for the Rockefeller group.

Some financial quarters suggested Stewart may be planning a coup against Rockefeller in the form of an attempt to prevent him from intervening in the Indiana concern's affairs, on the theory that the Standard Oil dissolution made all the Standards independent concerns, with none controlling the others.

Rockefeller, however, was described as acting as an individual stock holder and hence probably within his rights in seeking to remove an officer displeasing to him.

Governor's Waiting Room Always Full; "Nut" Letters Also Received

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 18.—Governor Cooper's waiting room was never so full as today.

Greeting him on his arrival at the state house every morning are scores of people—worn and weary.

Every conceivable request which could be filled by the governor—and many which cannot—is made of him during his office hours.

Chief among the reception-room waiters is the daily delegation of office-seekers. Many minor appointments have not yet been announced. But if all of the demands upon the chief executive were granted, these positions would be filled many times over.

Seated among the self-termed "great political influences in ward—"occasionally is a white-faced mother whose son is in the penitentiary. Or a prominent merchant from some village whose presence at the dedication of the new fire engine.

"Nut letters" have already begun to pour into Cooper's office.

One received yesterday and evidently influenced by Pennsylvania's "hex" murders, purported to explain to the governor the intricate relationship between life, death, ambition, personality and a few other items, all conveniently charted, too.

One of the chief ornaments of the flower-decked gubernatorial chambers is the horde of office-seekers.

THREE DEAD, SEVEN HURT IN BUILDING BLAST

Killing three persons and causing injuries to seven others, a gas explosion in the basement of a three-story building in Terre Haute, Ind., is believed to have been caused when a coal hauler broke the gas main while shoveling coal. Photo shows one building practically demolished and a number of nearby structures badly damaged.

LINK MURDER AND ATTEMPTED SUICIDE OF BANK OFFICIALS

President Of Indiana Attempts Own Life Shortly After Official Of Another Bank Slain; Funds Are Missing

SULLIVAN, Ind., Jan. 18.—The murder of Edgar D. Maple, vice president of the People's National Bank here, and the attempted suicide of Jessup F. Bolinger, president of the Shelby State Bank, were linked by police today in a confusing double mystery.

Maple was found shot to death near the vault of the People's Bank early Monday. A theory of suicide was abandoned when evidence disclosed he apparently had been murdered in a plot to steal $4,000 from the institution.

Bolinger, who attempted to asphyxiate himself in his garage, shortly after Maple's body was found, has been arrested after confessing that he had forged notes on Maple's bank. The amount of Bolinger's notes held by the People's Bank was said to be $75,000, most of which, examiners said, is fraudulent.

Examiners found Maple's accounts in good order and discredited the theory of suicide. The Shelby State Bank was closed after Bolinger's confession.

POLICE INSPECTOR DEAD AS PROMINENT CITIZEN RUNS WILD

Philadelphia Veteran Engaged In Duel With Officers

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18.—W. Griffith Gribbel, prominent man, was in a serious condition today after a gun battle with police in which an inspector was killed, a police chauffeur wounded and Gribbel himself shot three times.

The fight occurred in the Gribbel home in Chestnut Hill, an exclusive suburb, where Gribbel had been taken after treatment in a New York sanitarium. Gribbel has had recurrent nervous disorders, since he was shell-shocked and gassed in the World War.

The dead man is Inspector John Blackburn, who answered a call for help from Dr. John McCloskey, physician to Gribbel, after Gribbel had driven the doctor from the Gribbel home.

Blackburn and his chauffeur, Joseph Lawrence, entered the front door and found Gribbel downstairs. He opened fire on them. Blackburn fell, pierced by several bullets and Lawrence, standing a few feet behind him, also was wounded.

Then patrolmen, summoned to the Gribbel home, cornered Gribbel after exchanging shots, two of which struck the man in the stomach and one in the arm.

As Gribbel fell, he stumbled across Blackburn who was dying. Gribbel's condition was described by physicians as critical. Lawrence is expected to recover. Blackburn died at a hospital.

Blackburn's death was a fair description of the kidnappers.

Kirgan expressed the belief that Henderson had been taken for a "ride." He said he heard Cole say, after he was sentenced, that he "would hate to be in Henderson's shoes." Cole, the detective chief added, boasted of the large membership of his gang and remarked that "the gang hangs together in things like this."

Bayley gave Kirgan a fair description of the kidnappers.

OHIO INDUSTRIAL SITUATION GOOD STATE SURVEY INDICATES

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 18.—Ohio is making progressive strides in the industrial field, greater than the state has experienced in the past six years, according to a survey by the United Press.

If the present pace is maintained throughout the year, industrial production will show a fair indication of prosperity in view of the general employment situation in the country.

Included in the industries showing a rosy outlook for the current year are general mill and factory work, automobile manufacture, rubber and steel.

These branches have been operating beyond expectations since the new year, and executives are looking forward optimistically to the next eleven months.

The State-city Employment Bureau is finding it difficult to fill labor demands in the Cleveland area, so great is the expansion of industrial activity. Skilled mechanics and girls and men for factory work are particularly in demand.

Between 12,000 and 15,000 persons have been employed in Toledo since Jan. 1, the survey reveals.

More than 10,000 job seekers have found employment in the Willys-Overland automobile plant in Toledo. About 500 new employees are being taken on every day.

The payrolls at the end of January are expected to set a new monthly high mark in Ohio in the opinion of industrial magnates.

Fifty-one plants in the Toledo district had 40,712 persons on the payroll.

COLORFUL TEXAS RANCHER DIES

AMARILLO, Tex., Jan. 18.—The Texas panhandle has lost one of its most picturesque figures, Lee Bivins, 66, reputed to be the largest individual cattle owner in the world.

Bivins succumbed to an acute attack of indigestion in a Wichita Falls hospital last night.

Bivins became ill while enroute home from a visit with his sister at Sherman, Texas.

In thirty-eight years, since the day he roped his first steer on a small ranch near here, Bivins had amassed a fortune estimated at $200,000,000.

At the time of his death he owned 500,000 acres of land and ranches.

The veteran cow puncher was serving his second term as mayor of Amarillo, a post which citizens forced him to accept much against his will.

WILMINGTON HAS $28,000 BLAZE

WILMINGTON, O., Jan. 18.—Fire today destroyed a two-story brick building occupied by the Wilmington Tire and Vulcanizing Company, The Knights of Columbus club rooms and the Wilmington Oil Company. Damage was estimated at $28,000.

The blaze broke out when an air compressor exploded and knocked over a stove in the tire shop.

Recall Threats By Pair Sentenced In Prior Robbery

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 18.—The kidnappers who abducted Benjamin Henderson, cashier of the Camargo Bank at Maderia, near here early today, dumped him out of his own car at West Carrollton near Dayton, at 11:30 a. m., he advised his wife by telephone.

The cashier assured his wife he had not been injured.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 18.—Benjamin Henderson, cashier of the Camargo Bank at Maderia, near here, was kidnapped today as he left his 10-year-old daughter, Betty Jane, at a school in Oakley, another suburb.

The abduction was witnessed by Betty Jane who said "two men grabbed daddy and shoved him into a car" as she turned to wave goodbye to him.

The kidnappers are believed to be members of the Wilbur Cole-Edward Tuohy gang of Lancaster, Pa., who invaded the cashier's home two months ago, posted a guard over his wife and child, then forced Henderson to go to the bank and open the vault.

The handiwork was taken for a "ride." He said he heard Cole say, after he was sentenced, that he "would hate to be in Henderson's shoes." Cole, the detective chief added, boasted of the large membership of his gang and remarked that "the gang hangs together in things like this."

CHATTERJEE WILL ADDRESS CLUB HERE

The Friends of Books Club, realizing the almost universal interest in India at present due to the publication of "Mother India" feels unusually fortunate in having secured as the speaker for its meeting Friday evening, Professor M. N. Chatterjee, of Antioch College, who will speak on "Mother India" as he knows her. The meeting will be held at the library and will begin promptly at 8:00 o'clock.

To avoid confusion, Miss Mildred Sandoe asks that attention be called to the fact that the club, although possessed of a program committee, is otherwise without a membership roll and is free from membership dues. Consequently meetings are open to all interested and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance to show Xenia's gratitude to Professor Chatterjee for his trouble in making the trip to Xenia.

CONVICT FEMEELS ON CHECK CHARGE

It took a jury in Common Pleas Court less than fifteen minutes Thursday to convict Greene L. Femeels, colored, of an indictment charging him with issuing a check without sufficient funds in the bank. Sentence was deferred by the court.

The indictment accused Femeels of passing a worthless check for $52.25 on the C. S. Frazer shoe store June 18, 1928. The check was on the Commercial and Savings Bank.

Helped at Change of Life

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine at the Change of Life. I would get blue spells and just walk the floor. I was nervous, could not sleep at night, and was not able to do my work. I know if it had not been for your medicine I would have been in bed most of this time and had a big doctor's bill. If women would only take your medicine they would be better."

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. JAMES M'KENNA, 82

Mrs. James McKenna, 82, formerly of Xenia, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. L. Applegate at Cleveland, O., January 10. Burial was made in St. Joseph Cemetery at Cincinnati.

Mrs. McKenna was born in Xenia and made her home here until about twenty-five years ago when she moved to Cincinnati. Her husband died thirty years ago.

CHATTERJEE WILL ADDRESS CLUB HERE

The Friends of Books Club, realizing the almost universal interest in India at present due to the publication of "Mother India" feels unusually fortunate in having secured as the speaker for its meeting Friday evening, Professor M. N. Chatterjee, of Antioch College, who will speak on "Mother India" as he knows her. The meeting will be held at the library and will begin promptly at 8:00 o'clock.

To avoid confusion, Miss Mildred Sandoe asks that attention be called to the fact that the club, although possessed of a program committee, is otherwise without a membership roll and is free from membership dues. Consequently meetings are open to all interested and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance to show Xenia's gratitude to Professor Chatterjee for his trouble in making the trip to Xenia.

DIES WEDNESDAY

Mrs. Eva C. Hadley, 57, who for more than twenty-five years was in charge of the Clinton telephone exchange at Clarksville, died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Lola Hewitt, in that place, Wednesday evening. She was the mother of Mrs. Lola Scroggy, Xenia, and other surviving children are: Mrs. Lena D. Hunt, Colorado Springs, and Mrs. Fred Hadley, Leesburg. Funeral services will be conducted Saturday at 2 p. m. at the Clarksville M. E. Church.

Miss Mary Vashti Jones Heard By Club Women

People get through school knowing so little about how to conduct their own affairs afterwards, that Miss Mary Vashti Jones, brilliant young lawyer of Zanesville, who addressed the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club Thursday night, feels that some sort of training along that line should be provided.

Miss Jones talked on "Some Things Women Should Know About the Law," but she said that her subject did not indicate a lesser knowledge about simple law facts among women than among men.

GREENE COUNTIANS AT EXECUTIVE MANSION

Greene County people who attended the meetings of the Ohio Fair Managers' Association in Columbus Wednesday and Thursday, had the honor of being guests of Governor Myrta R. Wright, president of the association at luncheon at the executive mansion, Thursday.

About 200 attended the luncheon, among them following local people: Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bryson, Mr. Frank Turnbull, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Austin, and Representative and Mrs. R. D. Williamson. Governor Cooper has been head of the Ohio Fair Managers' Association for eleven years.

JOB'S EMPLOYEES HAVE STORE PARTY

A supper and Valentine party was enjoyed by employees of Job's Bros. Co., Thursday night at the store. Supper was served on the third floor, where there were decorations significant of Valentine's day, and the long tables were lighted with red candles. After supper bridge and 500 were played. Similar affairs are held every few weeks for the pleasure of the company's employees.

KONJOLA BANISHED EVERY SYMPTOM OF HEALTH TROUBLES

Xenia Lady Says All Trace Of Nerve And Stomach Misery Have Been Ended

It was predicted less than two months ago that the people of Xenia would very quickly find out about the merits of this celebrated new medicine, Konjola, which is being introduced and explained to large crowds each day at the Gallaher Drug Store. Report after report is being received from men and women of this city, describing the remarkable benefits derived from the use of this surprising new compound. For instance, just a few days ago Mrs. Anna Dunlap, New Burlington, Ohio (near Xenia) made the following statement:

MRS. ANNA DUNLAP

"Every trace of my health troubles have been banished through the use of Konjola," said Mrs. Dunlap, "and I am recommending this medicine in the hope that other sufferers will give it a fair trial because I know what it will do."

"Before I ever began taking Konjola, I was afflicted with neuritis that was so severe I often thought I could not bear the misery and what I did manage to force down, in order to nourish my body, always caused more harm than good. Due to the acid condition, there would be a bad taste in my mouth for hours after eating. Indigestion pains bothered me constantly and I never could find anything that relieved me. In fact, I was in a general rundown condition and early in the day I would become so exhausted it was impossible for me to do my housework."

"I had been reading the papers about Konjola and the unusual recommendations this medicine was receiving from Xenia people convinced me that it had real merit. I decided to give it a trial and have never regretted that. Konjola has turned out to be exactly what I always needed. Gradually the neuritis pains began to ease up and as I continued with the treatment, they completely disappeared. It has been some time since I finished taking Konjola and not a single trace of that ailment is permanent. My limbs are free and limber and I can get around without suffering the least bit. Konjola also banished every ugly stomach symptom and I am eating whatever is placed before me without after effects. I know that food will never cause the intense misery it formerly did. My strength and energy have returned and I have a keener enjoyment in the daily activities. It is a pleasure to endorse such a medicine as Konjola and I will do so at every chance I get."

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher Drug Store, 33 E. Main St. and by all the best druggists throughout this entire section.

EIGHTY ATTEND MERGED LEAGUE AND RED CROSS DINNER MEETING

The Rev. Harvey E. Crowell of Osborn, president of the Greene County Red Cross, was the principal speaker at the first meeting and banquet of the affiliated Social Service League and Red Cross in the dining room of the Reformed Church Thursday night.

Covers were laid for eighty. The program of talks following the meal was interspersed with music furnished by members of the Xenia Woman's Music Club. J. H. Nagley, president of the Social Service League, presided.

The Rev. Mr. Crowell's address was based upon the work of the Red Cross and Social Service League, and the movement which has resulted in their affiliation.

Karl R. Babb, past president of the League, talked about the work which has been performed by that organization.

The County Health League work was explained by Dr. R. R. McClellan. Mrs. E. H. Carruthers gave a short history of the early charitable work in Xenia performed by the Women's Benevolent Association.

Mrs. Yeola Purdom Eder touched upon her work as executive secretary of the Greene County Red Cross. A skeletonized report of her work as public health nurse for the Social Service League, was given by Miss Jennie Moffett. Miss Moffett also reported regarding the Kiwanis-Social Service League baby clinic, in the absence of Dr. H. C. Messenger.

Mrs. Emma McCalmont, as executive secretary and treasurer of the Social Service League, made her report.

The program opened with singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee" with violin and piano accompaniment by Mrs. Louis Hammerle and Miss Marguerite Williams. The invocation was by the Rev. W. N. Shank.

Mrs. Lawrence Shields, president of the music club, presented Mrs. W. H. McGervey, who sang two numbers. Two violin selections were rendered by Mrs. Hammerle and Mrs. James Wilson sang two numbers.

It has been planned that each organization retain its own officers and directorate for a time. J. C. Marshall as chairman of the Social Service League nominating committee, reported the following selections for all officers except her report.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 18.—Lewis F. Laylin, Columbus, was appointed chief counsel today by Attorney General Gilbert Bettman. Laylin has been in the attorney general's office since 1927 as special counsel.

Chief counsel is a new office created by Bettman to aid in handling the additional duties of the offices imposed by recent legislation. The attorney general will continue to sign all opinions and superintend litigation.

"The chief counsel will act in an advisory capacity during the preparation of opinions and will be available for conference on trial cases now pending," Bettman explained.

Laylin was the city attorney of Columbus prior to his state position. He is the son of Lewis O. Laylin, secretary of state for three terms, and assistant secretary of the interior under President Taft.

BANKER EMBEZZLER SENT TO MANSFIELD

CANTON, O., Jan. 18.—B. F. Clapper, Massillon bank teller, had "littered a load off his mind" and was "feeling better" today as he was preparing to begin an indeterminate sentence in Mansfield Reformatory on a charge of embezzlement.

He pleaded guilty before Common Pleas Judge A. W. Agler to the charge that he had embezzled $13,500 from the Ohio Merchants Trust Co., at Massillon where he was employed.

Clapper discharged his attorney, declined Judge Agler's offer to appoint a lawyer for him and entered

Influenza Much Milder This Year Than in 1918

But Vicks Laboratories Again Operating Night and Day to Supply Record-Making Demand.

Although the type of flu this year is not so serious as in 1918, health authorities are urging everybody to treat even the slightest cold at the start, as colds lower the resistance and make the body an easy prey to bronchitis or pneumonia.

An interesting response to this warning has been the phenomenal call for Vicks VapoRub, the external treatment which proved so helpful in the 1918 epidemic.

In spite of vastly increased capacity, the Vicks laboratories are once more operating all night long and are now producing 375,000 jars daily. A substantial part of this increase is attributed to the wide spread use of Vicks as a preventive.

his plea of guilty. He also declined a suggestion that a motion for probation be filed. "I am guilty," he said, "and will feel better when I have paid the legal penalty for my delinquency."

COMMISSION MEET SCHEDULED FRIDAY

For the purpose of selecting a successor to John W. Prugh as a member of City Commission and mayor of the city of Xenia, City Commission tentatively arranged to hold a special meeting at 4:30 o'clock Friday afternoon.

S. M. McKay, president of the commission, who returned to the city late Friday morning after a brief absence, instructed City Auditor T. H. Zell to issue a call for a special meeting at that time, but it was not certain whether all of the commissioners would find it convenient to attend the session.

The commission is expected to give its entire attention to making an appointment to fill the unexpired term of Prugh and to also appoint a mayor for the remainder of 1929.

Miss Mary Vashti Jones Heard By Club Women

People get through school knowing so little about how to conduct their own affairs afterwards, that Miss Mary Vashti Jones, brilliant young lawyer of Zanesville, who addressed the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club Thursday night, feels that some sort of training along that line should be provided.

Miss Jones talked on "Some Things Women Should Know About the Law," but she said that her subject did not indicate a lesser knowledge about simple law facts among women than among men.

KONJOLA BANISHED EVERY SYMPTOM OF HEALTH TROUBLES

Xenia Lady Says All Trace Of Neuritis And Stomach Misery Have Been Ended

It was predicted less than two months ago that the people of Xenia would very quickly find out about the merits of this celebrated medicine, Konjola, which is being introduced and explained to large crowds each day at the Gallaher Drug Store. Report after report is being received from men and women of this city, describing the remarkable benefits derived from the use of this surprising new compound. For instance, just a few days ago Mrs. Anna Dunlap, New Burlington, Ohio (near Xenia) made the following statement:

"Every trace of my health troubles have been banished through the use of Konjola," said Mrs. Dunlap, "and I am recommending this medicine in the hope that other sufferers will give it a fair trial because I know what it will do."

"Before I ever began taking Konjola, I was afflicted with neuritis that was so severe I often thought I could not bear the misery any longer. The pains seemed to settle in my limbs and this made it very hard for me to get around. It was practically impossible for me to sleep at night and during the entire day the pains did not diminish the least bit. Then I began to have trouble with my stomach and I completely lost my appetite. I did not care to eat anything and what I did manage to force down in order to nourish my body, always caused more harm than good. Due to the acid condition there would be a bad taste in my mouth for hours after eating. Indigestion pains bothered me constantly and I never could find anything that relieved me. In fact, I was in a poor, rundown condition and early in the day I would become so exhausted it was impossible for me to do my housework."

"I had been reading the papers about Konjola and the unusual recommendations this medicine was receiving from Xenia people convinced me that it had real merit. I decided to give it a trial and have never regretted that. Konjola has turned out to be exactly what I always needed. Gradually the neuritis pains began to ease up and as I continued with the treatment, they completely disappeared."

Since I finished taking Konjola and not a single trace of that ailment has returned so I know the relief is permanent. My limbs are free and limber and I can get around without suffering the least bit. Konjola also banished every ugly stomach symptom and I am eating whatever is placed before me without after effects. I know that food will never cause the intense misery it formerly did. My strength and energy have returned and I have a keener enjoyment in the daily activities. It is a pleasure to endorse such a medicine as Konjola and I will do so at every chance I get."

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher Drug Store, 33 E. Main St., and by the best druggists throughout this entire section.

EIGHTY ATTEND MERGED LEAGUE AND RED CROSS DINNER MEETING

The Rev. Harvey E. Crowell of Osborn, president of the Greene County Red Cross, was the principal speaker at the first meeting and banquet of the affiliated Social Service League and Red Cross in the dining room of the Reformed Church Thursday night.

Covers were laid for eighty. The program of talks following the meal was interspersed with music furnished by members of the Xenia Woman's Music Club. J. H. Nagley, president of the Social Service League, presided.

The Rev. Mr. Crowell's address was based upon the work of the Red Cross and Social Service League, and the movement which has resulted in their affiliation.

Karl R. Babb, past president of the League, talked about the work which has been performed by that organization.

The County Health League work was explained by Dr. R. R. McClellan. Mrs. E. H. Carruthers gave a short history of the early charitable work in Xenia performed by the Women's Benevolent Association.

Mrs. Yeola Purdom Edler touched upon her work as executive secretary of the Greene County Red Cross. A skeletonized report of her work as public health nurse for the Social Service League, was given by Miss Jennie Moffett. Miss Moffett also reported regarding the Kiwanis-Social Service League baby clinic, in the absence of Dr. H. C. Messenger.

Mrs. Emma McCalmont, as executive secretary and treasurer of the Social Service League, made her report.

The program opened with singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee" with violin and piano accompaniment by Mrs. Louis Hammerle and Miss Marguerite Williams. The invocation was by the Rev. W. N. Shank. Mrs. Lawrence Shields, president of the music club, presented Mrs. W. H. McGervey, who sang two numbers. Two violin selections were rendered by Mrs. Hammerle and Mrs. James Wilson sang two numbers.

It has been planned that each organization retain its own officers and directorate for a time. J. C. Marshall as chairman of the Social Service League nominating committee, reported the following selections for all officers except

ATTORNEY GENERAL HAS CHIEF COUNSEL

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 18.—Lewis F. Laylin, Columbus, was appointed chief counsel today by Attorney General Gilbert Bettman. Laylin has been in the attorney general's office since 1927 as special counsel.

Chief counsel is a new office created by Bettman to aid in handling the additional duties of the offices imposed by recent legislation. The attorney general will continue to sign all opinions and superintend litigation.

"The chief counsel will act in an advisory capacity during the preparation of opinions and will be available for conference on trial cases now pending," Bettman explained.

Laylin was the city attorney of Columbus prior to his state position. He is the son of Lewis O. Laylin, secretary of state for three terms, and assistant secretary of the interior under President Taft.

BANKER EMBEZZLER SENT TO MANSFIELD

CANTON, O., Jan. 18.—B. F. Clapper, Massillon bank teller, had "littered a load off his mind" and was "feeling better" today as he was preparing to begin an indeterminate sentence in Mansfield Reformatory on a charge of embezzlement.

He pleaded guilty before Common Pleas Judge A. W. Agler to the charge that he had embezzled $13,500 from the Ohio Merchants Trust Co., at Massillon where he was employed.

Clapper discharged his attorney, declined Judge Agler's offer to appoint a lawyer for him and entered

Influenza Much Milder This Year Than in 1918

But Vicks Laboratories Again Operating Night and Day to Supply Record-Making Demand.

Although the type of flu this year is not so serious as in 1918, health authorities are urging everybody to treat even the slightest cold at the start, as colds lower the resistance and make the body an easy prey to bronchitis or pneumonia.

An interesting response to this warning has been the phenomenal call for Vicks VapoRub, the external treatment which proved so helpful in the 1918 epidemic.

In spite of vastly increased capacity, the Vicks laboratories are now operating all night long and are now producing 375,000 jars daily. A substantial part of this increase is attributed to the widespread use of Vicks as a preventive.

S. M. McKay, president of the commission, who returned to the city late Friday morning after a brief absence, instructed City Auditor T. H. Zell to issue a call for a special meeting at that time, but it was not certain whether all of the commissioners would find it convenient to attend the session.

The commission is expected to give its entire attention to making an appointment to fill the unexpired term of Prugh and to also appoint a mayor for the remainder of 1929.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

CLEANSING NEEDED—Though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord God.—Jeremiah 2:22.

MAKING THE UGLY BEAUTIFUL

"There is no such thing," says Antoine, "as an ugly woman!"

Now this piece of intelligence may come as a great big surprise to a few million men who have been frequenting bathing beaches, sitting across the aisle in subways, theatres, busses and churches and across the table at breakfast these many years. But Antoine says so, emphatically, authoritatively, unqualifiedly. He says so in an interview in Harper's Bazar.

And who is this Antoine? THIS Antoine, indeed! What John Gilbert is to a love scene, what Rodin is to sculpture, what Babe Ruth is to baseball, what Ziegfeld is to the girl-gag-and-glitter shows, so is Antoine to the art of hairdressing!

What Antoine means precisely is that there need be no such thing as an ugly woman. She may have a snub nose and big, fawn eyes, or a perfect nose and oversized ears, or a peach-bloom complexion and a receding chin. But Antoine contends that every woman has one good feature. If she emphasizes that by the most effective modeling of her hair, she can make herself attractive.

Antoine works to prove his contentions. He takes a model, a baby-faced one who looks like a John Held caricature, smooths out the skew curls, brings the hair back in two loose, even waves over the ears, and instead of a snub-nosed jazz child he presents a madonna. He does something similar with the lady of the oversized chin, or the one whose ears are her sole redeeming feature.

And so a new science or a new art is being developed. Perhaps it may be extended to other lines. It might be used for instance, in making ugly homes attractive, gloomy looking business buildings beautiful and whole cities charming spots with every street an alluring paradise.

INDUSTRY AND PREPAREDNESS

The importance of industry, as well as armies and navies, to any scheme of national defense, is emphasized by the appointment of a special Committee by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to outline what business can do in the way of contributing to national security.

This committee on National Defense, of which Ernest T. Trigg, president of John Lucas and Company, Philadelphia, is chairman, has undertaken a thorough-going study to ascertain what contribution business may make to a more intelligent understanding and co-operation in the interest of the nation's defenses. Among other things attention will be given to the feasibility of educational orders issued by the War department as a means of familiarizing manufacturing concerns in peace time with the requirements of the service branches in time of emergency.

Your BROADWAY

NEW YORK.—The clowns would have you believe that the day Whalen was made New York's police commissioner a certain cop was fired who "turned in his shield, revolver and monocle."

VIC'S SALVE

Almost all of the folk dramas arriving recently deal with restless young couples who "seek something out of life." In the newest play, "Skyrocket," the Vic Ewings, who were poor Brooklyn dwellers, itched for that "something" in life, and finally got it. That "something" appeared to be good old-fashioned trouble, and not until Vic Ewing got too rich too hurriedly did the Ewings start fussing with each other.

The title of the piece telegraphed Author Mark Reed's long going before the asbestos lifted. You expected that some one was going to ride as swiftly as a skyrocket only to go phfft! and come down to earth again. That's exactly what happened to Vic, who slew a wicked line of salve waiting for his "break," which came. Then the Ewings sailed high until his wings were clipped by the stock market.

It is similar, "Saturday's Children" only here and there, but it is frair entertainment at the most. It is never a bother, however, because Mr. Reed has seasoned it with some amusing passages, most of which are artfully handled by the talented J. C. Nugent, who has written plays along the same pattern. The others are skilled pretenders, which make "Skyrocket" fit for man or critic while he is witnessing it, but it doesn't send you away fully contented. It probably will not thrive.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

FUTILE

A wise woman by the name of Elizabeth Marbury said the other day: "I never crab about anything. It is very, very futile." Of course there are many fine, philosophical reasons why we should not "carry a grudge" or crab about things, but this simple reason is a good one, and sufficient. What's the use? On the most selfish grounds, it's very, very futile.

DO YOU KNOW?

It has been said that "an artist has nothing to say until he has painted 10,000 pictures." Few of us are artists, but the application of the suggestion is just as good. Most of us are quick to give our opinion about almost anything. With the least bit of experience we set ourselves up for authorities. This is coming to be a very highly competitive world and we had better stay out of things that we are not prepared for. When we have painted 10,000 pictures we have some right to speak. Until then we might better look and listen.

IN 100 YEARS

In 100 years from today it is not probable that a single person now alive will be playing any part in the affairs of this world. And yet we expect the world to be run much better than it is now. One hundred years is but a moment of time as measured over the long run. With that thought seriously in mind, how important it becomes that we give every bit of our best effort to helping today's boys and girls to be better men and women than we are. We shall presently all be out of the picture. But we have a great deal to say as to how things are going to be carried on in the long, long, future.

CONTACT

Contact is one of the most important words in the language. Contact is the basis of the best in education. Education filters through personality. Contact of a pupil with the right personality may mean that a light will steal upon him, faintly but steadily as the dawn. Or one day it may illuminate him like the white light of the Damascus road. His soul is set aglow by the candle of another life, and he becomes something that he never was before. And he will never be the same again.

Advancement of Foreign Air Mail Connections Predicted

By HARRY S. NEW Postmaster General.
(Harry Stewart New was born at Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 31, 1858. He was educated in the public schools of that city and Butler university. He was on the editorial staff of the Indianapolis Journal for 25 years, finally becoming publisher in 1903. Later he became president of the Bedford Stone and Construction company. From 1896 to 1900 he served as a member of the Indiana State senate. For 12 years he was a member of the Republican national committee acting as chairman in 1907 and 1908. He served one term as United States senator and was named postmaster general in 1923. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war and his home is in Indianapolis.)

Great progress should be made this year in connecting the air mail service of the United States with foreign countries, particularly the nations of Central and South America.

As the year 1928 was conspicuous, so far as the post office department is concerned, in the widespread development of the air mail service in the United States, so will 1929 stand out, in my opinion, as a year marked by great strides in connecting our own efficient air service with foreign countries, principally in South and Central America.

Already we have in daily operation a line connecting New York with northern neighbor, Canada, at Montreal, and the prospects are favorable for a material extension of the Canadian service to a number of important cities in that country.

Three foreign routes were scheduled to begin within the first two weeks of the new year, two of which mark the beginning of what will ultimately become a web of the air, tying up in a close chain of communication the two continents of the western hemisphere.

Emanating from Miami, Fla., where direct connection is made with the domestic air mail system, the three routes go, one to Nassau, in the Bahamas, one to Porto Rico, and the third to the Panama Canal Zone.

Of perhaps equal importance in the prospective development of American foreign trade, not only with South and Central America, but with other foreign countries, has been the awarding of ocean mail contracts under the Jones-White act for the development of the American merchant marine. As a result of contracts already awarded, 26 new vessels are to be constructed within a three-year period.

SWEET LAND OF LIBERTY

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Frederick J. Libby, undoubtedly is absolutely right in saying that the rest of the world never will pick a quarrel with the United States, in the hope of cancelling its debts to us, while it thinks a chance remains to borrow any more here.

Coming from the executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, which is his job, Mr. Libby's remark may sound cynical. Anyway, it sounds mighty sensible.

Uncle Sam might be hard to lick in a fight. On the other hand, he is the easiest mark on earth to hornsawage.

Preparations are in progress now for the peaceful separation of Uncle Sam from a few more billions of his financial increment, by means of a game known as "reparations negotiations"—a game the European powers are sharks at and Uncle Sam the veriest sucker, but a game in which it seems hopeless to touch him not to take a hand every time he's invited.

The pathetic part of it is to see our poor uncle taking what he fondly believes are precautions against being flim-flammed. A lamb, in that bunch of wolves!—taking precautions!

The case stands thus—The allied powers came out of the World War owing the United States about 12 billion dollars, which they still owe.

Germany came out owing no war debts to any foreign country, having financed her side of the conflict internally—but owing an indefinite amount of money in damages—"reparations."

The allies tried their best to get the United States to wipe their score clean, but Uncle Sam balked.

Then they proposed to assign their German reparations to America, settling everything that way. Unable to see why he should assume the burden of collecting a lot of doubtful reparations, as a substitute for money honestly due him, Uncle Sam balked on that, too.

Since that time the debtor nations have been racking their brains for some scheme to enrich the U. S. A. out of its 12 billions without frankly defaulting repayment, which they rightly judged would hurt their credit.

Meanwhile they continue to exact reparations regularly from Germany—on account of a total never definitely determined. Finally this uncertainty began to prey on the German taxpayers' minds as to threaten an embarrassing situation—perhaps a collapse of German payments, the Germans quite reasonably arguing that maybe they could stand reparations, but they wanted to feel they were making some progress.

"Very well," said the ex-allies, "suppose we agree on a total and you Germans issue bonds for it. You can sell the bonds and give us the money. Out of it we will pay the United States and everything will be lovely."

The Germans were willing. It is to fix the total amount of reparations that the coming negotiations were called—the ones Uncle Sam is urged to take a hand in.

"Bu," ass some curious person, "who is to buy the German bonds?"—enabling Germany to pay the ex-allies, enabling them, in turn, to pay Uncle Sam.

"Why, Uncle Sam will buy the bonds, of course," reply the ex-allies.

And will Uncle Sam buy them? You know he will. As Mr. Libby says, only a very silly bunch of debtor nations would go to war to cancel their obligations to such an uncle. It is so much simpler and pleasanter to gyp him!

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Personally, I don't like serpents. But I can appreciate the ease with which a serpent moves. I envy the privilege it enjoys of shedding its skin, but I still cherish a private repulsion for serpents. That is, however, a personal commentary on the species and has nothing to do with my evolution exercises.

Rolling seems to me to be the most practical and satisfying of all the exercise routines, since it accomplishes more with less effort than anything else I know of. Naturally, I cannot help but realize what an inducement this is to the busy woman—and in this day and age—aren't we all busy?

Rolling is really a most interesting and beneficial exercise, and it has as another special advantage, the ability to remove surplus flesh. Seriously, it is one of the best possible reducing exercises imaginable. It both invigorates and improves the circulation of all the parts that come in contact with the earth. The entire weight of the body is placed at different times on different parts of the body—forequently unused parts, which is a most element of great advantage. As a matter of fact, rolling constitutes a splendid massage, and I don't think any one can deny the value of massage. However, here's a little point which can make your rolling doubly efficient. When you start to make the turn, concentrate the action on the center muscles of your body. Instead of turning in an easy, unmuscular movement, turn from the waist, twisting sideways from the center of your back with a distinct pull at the waist center, back and hip muscles.

In this way you will have the double benefit of a waist and abdominal exercise and a beneficial massage. It's a good thing to protect your bust by crossing your hands over the chest before you start rolling. While this isn't an absolutely necessary precaution it is a worthy one, especially if your busts are heavy, and it may make your exercise a little easier to perform.

As the body rolls toward the side, bring up your right knee. Now turn over on the back, and, pushing from those middle muscles, let the body roll relaxed over onto the stomach. Repeat the roll to the other side.

In concluding, let me urge you to roll, if it is at all possible, in the open where your lungs can be filled with pure, fresh air. Failing that, open windows wide so that there is an invigorating

Watch the Gas
Here are some reasons why the domestic gas bill is sometimes larger than it need be, says the New York State Committee on Public Utility Information:

Because the giant burner on the range is used when a smaller one would do.

Because two burners are lighted together and one kept burning for some time before the food is ready to be cooked on it.

Because the food is taken off the stove and the burner is left lighted.

Because the gas oven is used to heat the kitchen and dry damp clothes.

Because a worn-out range is used, with burners out of adjustment.

Because food and water are permitted to boil furiously, although they would cook as fast with the burner turned down.

Because burners are not kept clean.

Because cooking utensils larger than are needed are used.

Because open vessels are used, consuming five times as much gas as closed vessels of the same size.

Because the gas flame is not protected from the side-drafts.

Because a gallon of water is heated when only a pint is needed.

Because violent boiling, with the lid on, and the gas on full, consumes about nine times as much gas as will maintain gentle boiling.

Because for gentle boiling five times as much gas is used when the lid is off as when it is on.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D., AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Before Operation

"I have a little son aged eight years, who, the doctors says, has a bad appendix that should come out. However, he never complains of a pain there and seems very lively and full of pep. When the doctor pressed on his right side, he jumped a little and therefore the doctor said his appendix was affected. He is taking a medicine before meals which the doctor prescribed for him. I don't want to have him operated on if I can possibly help it. Do you think it advisable to take him to another doctor, or have an X-ray taken?"

"My husband is under the impression that a person can never live longer than 15 years at the most after the appendix is taken out. Will you please advise me if there is any truth in this, which he says he read in a reliable magazine."

"MRS. E." Before any serious operation that isn't urgent, a patient is justified in asking for a consultation with another surgeon. In your case, I would ask for a consultation with a children's specialist.

That a person cannot live longer than 15 years after the appendix is taken out, was not read in a reliable magazine, as your husband thinks, Mrs. E. It sounds like a cultist's or faddist's magazine. It is utter nonsense, no truth in it at all.

Mrs. E. has lost 45 pounds, but she is still too fat in the hips and thighs. What to do?

This unequal distribution of fat bothers a great many. The only thing to do, besides general reduction, is to take special exercise and massage for those parts (except the breasts). Good exercises for the hips are rolling and kicking, and brisk walking with long strides. You have to keep them up for a long time, before you begin to see results. I told you of a woman friend of mine who was overfat only around the hips. She took the kicking exercises—kicking back and forth and sideways—twice a day, in relays of 100; and in three months she had kicked off three inches. She found that the exercise improved her health. She did not need to diet.

Rolling is a splendid exercise. You can do this without becoming dizzy if you don't keep rolling over and over. Simply lie on your back and roll over until you are on your back again; then go back. In this way you automatically compress and massage your hips and abdomen. Our exercises for the trunk muscles will be effective. The trunk muscles are the most neglected muscles in the body, and they should be exercised vigorously every day because they are so vital.

Swimming is very good. Write in for our article on the Atomic Abdominal Wall, and if you are in need of instructions on reducing, ask for our pamphlet on the subject.

M.—If you have catarrh with an inflammation of the nasal sinuses (the passages leading from the nose), undoubtedly that will be part of the cause of some of your headaches. And the little pieces of whitish matter that you can press out of your tonsils most assuredly add more than a little. These little masses are decomposed material made up of the epithelial cells cast off from the tonsils, food debris and germs. You have what is known as cryptic tonsils. You should be taking treatments for these tonsils and throat specialist for both your troubles.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

What a cruel thing a laugh may be. Especially when one is young and sensitive. It may break a spirit more easily than a blow. One can return a blow, or an angry word. These are something one can fight. But when one is laughed at one is helpless. Any protest only increases the mirth. If one has a suspicion one is being laughed at one's morale is ruined. Even the most poised person is susceptible to ridicule.

"DEAR MRS. LEE: I would like you to tell me what is the matter with me. I go to high school. I moved from the country two years ago and haven't a girl friend or boy. Now, Mrs. Lee, I don't know whether it is my clothes or what. They are good but not fancy. My folks won't let me run around nights. I mean they won't let me go out in the evening. And if they do I go with my 10-year-old brother. The girls and boys make fun of me and call me names. Mrs. Lee, I am so lonesome. My only companions are books. What is wrong with me? We live in the best part of town. I don't dance or play cards and I don't believe in necking. That is one reason why they don't like me. They make my life unhappy all the time. Some times I think I will quit school. But my folks want me to go through high school and be a nurse. Maybe it is because I am funny. They say I am. Mrs. Lee, tell me what to do."

LONESOME."

It is hard to know what to say, dear, without seeing you. It is though a guess on the part of these young people, I am sure, not conscious cruelty, and surely not all your schoolmates do it. Are you sure you are not over sensitive? Most of us have felt we were the objects of derision some time in our extreme youth. The only thing to do is to ignore it and realize that only very ignorant and ill-bred people would treat anyone so. It is merely revealing their own lack of breeding. Incidentally, you can look yourself over and see if there is anything about your appearance that would amuse anyone. Do you always look well groomed? Immaculately clean, teeth and hair well brushed, you.

"BENNY M." I don't think you should be compelled to go to the show with the man so often, Benny, even if he did fight in the war. He is too old for you to go with steadily. Can't you excuse yourself by saying you have studying to do, without hurting his feelings? It would be better for him to get a girl friend nearer his own age. I think your mother should manage the matter for you.

"DEAR MRS. LEE: I am a girl 15 years old and going with a boy 30. He comes and takes me to a show every other night. I take my sister with me because I don't like to go alone with him. But I don't like to have him come to see me because I have another boy friend. He lives so far away from me that he can't come to see me during the week. The first boy fought during the war and went across the sea, and mother says for me not to hurt his feelings. So please, Mrs. Lee, tell me what to do."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

CLEANSING NEEDED—Though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord God.—Jeremiah 2:22.

MAKING THE UGLY BEAUTIFUL

"There is no such thing," says Antoine, "as an ugly woman!"

Now this piece of intelligence may come as a great big surprise to a few million men who have been frequenting bathing beaches, sitting across the aisle in subways, theatres, busses and churches and across the table at breakfast these many years. But Antoine says so, emphatically, authoritatively, unqualifiedly. He says so in an interview in Harper's Bazar.

And who is this Antoine? THIS Antoine, indeed! What John Gilbert is to a love scene, what Rodin is to sculpture, what Babe Ruth is to baseball, what Ziegfeld is to the girl-gag-and-glitter shows, so is Antoine to the art of hairdressing!

What Antoine means precisely is that there need be no such thing as an ugly woman. She may have a snub nose and big, fawn eyes, or a perfect nose and oversized ears, or a peach-bloom complexion and a receding chin. But Antoine contends that every woman has one good feature. If she emphasizes that by the most effective modeling of her hair, she can make herself attractive.

Antoine works to prove his contentions. He takes a model, a baby-faced one who looks like a John Held caricature, smooths out the skew curls, brings the hair back in two loose, even waves over the ears, and instead of a snub-nosed jazz child he presents a madonna. He does something similar with the lady of the oversized chin, or the one whose ears are her sole redeeming feature.

And so a new science or a new art is being developed. Perhaps it may be extended to other lines. It might be used for instance, in making ugly homes attractive, gloomy looking business buildings beautiful and whole cities charming spots with every street an alluring paradise.

INDUSTRY AND PREPAREDNESS

The importance of industry, as well as armies and navies, to any scheme of national defense, is emphasized by the appointment of a special Committee by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to outline what business can do in the way of contributing to national security.

This committee on National Defense, of which Ernest T. Trigg, president of John Lucas and Company, Philadelphia, is chairman, has undertaken a thorough-going study to ascertain what contribution business may make to a more intelligent understanding and co-operation in the interest of the nation's defenses. Among other things attention will be given to the feasibility of educational orders issued by the War department as a means of familiarizing manufacturing concerns in peace time with the requirements of the service branches in time of emergency.

Your BROADWAY And Mine

By Walter Winchell

NEW YORK.—The clowns would have you believe that the day when New York's police commissioner was made New York's police commissioner, a certain cop was fired who "turned in his shield, revolver and monocle."

HE'S PUN-CH DRUNK!

And Wallace Sullivan argues that William Wrigley is Chicago's most famous gumban.

VIC'S SALVE

Almost all of the folk dramas arriving recently deal with restless young couples who "seek something out of life." In the newest play, "Skyrocket," the Vic Ewings, who were poor Brooklyn dwellers, itched for that "something" in life, and finally got it. That "something" appeared to be good old-fashioned trouble, and not until Vic Ewings got too riotous hurriedly did the Ewings start fussing with each other.

The title of the piece telegraphed Author Mark Reed's theme long before the asbestos lifted. You suspected that some one was going to ride as swiftly as a skyrocket only to go phfft! and come down to earth again. That's exactly what happened to Vic, who slew a wicked line of salve waiting for his "break," which came. Then the Ewings sailed high until his wings were clipped by the stock market.

It is similar to "Saturday's Children" only here and there, but it is frail entertainment at the most. It is never a bother, however, because Mr. Reed has seasoned it with some amusing passages, most of which are artfully handled by the talented J. C. Nugent, who has written plays along the same pattern. The others are skilled pretenders, which make "Skyrocket" fit for man or critic while he is witnessing it, but it doesn't send you away fully contented. It probably will not thrive.

THE BEST SIMILES OF 1928

Frank J. Willstach the compiler of "The Dictionary of Similes," has gathered another harvest, his eighth annual. The fashion of simile-building is becoming a national pastime and it is with no little pride that this bureau contributed an abundance of them. You probably will recall them or the names of their contributors. The similes not credited here are marked Anon and I bid in Mr. W's book of them.

As a porcupine with in-grown quills . . . Dr. Butler has made so many speeches his teeth are getting to look like phonograph needles. — Bugs Baer.

As good company as a night nurse.—Haywood Brown.

Long as a wait for Mayor J. J. Walker.—James S. Collins.

Dempsey will knock him stiffer than a dress shirt.—Jack Conway.

As welcome to membership as an acrobat in the Lambs Club.—Nat Dorfman. He moaned like a busted telephone.—James J. Jennings.

He broke her nose into as many pieces as a Liberty seal.—Walter O'Keefe. . . Scarce as a Scotch bigamist.—Judge.

Bored as a chorus girl on the show's second night.—Arthur Kotler. . . As uninteresting as a Sunday dramatic page in July.—C. A. Leonard.

Falls as flat as a Levine reception.—Pare Lorentz.

Low as the insteps of a duck.—George D. Lottman.

As monotonous as a second visit to a night club.—Tom Mason.

As unquestionable as the intentions of a musical comedy hero.—Rose Watkins. . . As safe from arrest as a New York gangster.

As unknown as the other senator from Idaho. . . Fair as a Mexican general's trial. . . As loose and flabby as last year's garters.

Democratic as a sailor's sweetheart when the fleet is in.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

FUTILE

A wise woman by the name of Elizabeth Marbury said the other day: "I never crab about anything. It is very, very futile." Of course there are many fine philosophical reasons why we should not "carry a grudge" or crab about things, but this simple reason is a good one, and sufficient. What's the use? On the most selfish grounds, it's very, very futile.

DO YOU KNOW?

It has been said that "an artist has nothing to say until he has painted 10,000 pictures." Few of us are artists, but the application of the suggestion is just as good. Most of us are quick to give our opinion about almost anything. With the least bit of experience we set ourselves up for authorities. This is coming to be a very highly competitive world, and we had better stay out of things that we are not prepared for. When we have painted 10,000 pictures we have some right to speak. Until then we might better look and listen.

IN 100 YEARS

In 100 years from today it is not probable that a single person who alive will be playing any part in the affairs of this world. And yet we expect the world to be run much better than it is now. One hundred years is but a moment as time is measured over the long run. With that thought seriously in mind, how important it becomes that we give every bit of our best effort to helping today's boys and girls to be better men and women than we are. We shall presently all be out of the picture. But we have a great deal to say as to how things are going to be carried on in the long, long, future.

CONTACT

Contact is one of the most important words in the language. Contact is the basis of the best in education. Education filters through personality. Contact of a pupil with the right personality may mean that a light will steal upon him, faintly but steadily as the dawn. Or one day it may illuminate him like the white light of the Damascus road. His soul is set on fire by the candle of another life, and he becomes something that he never was before. And he will never be the same again.

Advancement of Foreign Air Mail Connections Predicted

By HARRY S. NEW Postmaster General

(Harry Stewart New was born at Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 31, 1858. He was educated in the public schools of that city and Butler university. He was on the editorial staff of the Indianapolis Journal for 25 years, finally becoming publisher in 1903. Later he became president of the Bedford Stone and Construction company. From 1896 to 1900 he served as a member of the Indiana State senate. For 12 years he was a member of the Republican national committee acting as chairman in 1907 and 1908. He served on the United States senator and was named postmaster general in 1923. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war and his home is in Indianapolis.)

Great progress should be made this year in connecting the air mail service of the United States with foreign countries, particularly the nations of Central and South America.

As the year 1928 was conspicuous, so far as the post office department is concerned, in the widespread development of the air mail service, the United States so will 1929 stand out in my opinion, as a year marked by great strides in connecting our own efficient air service with foreign countries, principally in South and Central America.

Already we have in daily operation a line connecting New York with our northern neighbor, Canada, at Montreal, and the prospects are favorable for a material extension of the Canadian service to a number of important cities in that country.

Three foreign routes were scheduled to begin within the first two weeks of the new year, two of which mark the beginning of what will ultimately become a web of the air, tying up in a close skein of communication the two continents of the western hemisphere.

Emanating from Miami, Fla., where direct connection is made with the domestic air mail system, the three routes go, one to Nassau, in the Bahamas, one to Porto Rico, and the third to the Panama Canal Zone.

Of perhaps equal importance in the prospective development of American foreign trade, not only with South and Central America, but with other foreign countries, has been the awarding of ocean mail contracts under the Jones-White act for the development of the American merchant marine. As a result of contracts already awarded, 26 new vessels are to be constructed within a three-year period.

SWEET LAND OF LIBERTY

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Frederick J. Libby, undoubtedly is absolutely right in saying that the rest of the world never will pick a quarrel with the United States, in the hope of cancelling its debts to us, while it thinks a chance remains to borrow any more here.

Coming from the executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, which is his job, Mr. Libby's remark may sound cynical. Anyway, it sounds sensible.

Uncle Sam might be hard to lick in a fight. On the other hand, he is the easiest mark on earth to hornswoggle.

Preparations are in progress now for the peaceful separation of Uncle Samuel from a few more billions of his financial increment, by means of a game known as "reparations negotiations."

A game the European powers are sharps at and Uncle Samuel the veriest sucker, but a game in which it seems hopeless to teach him not to take a hand every time he is invited.

The pathetic part of it is to see our poor uncle taking what he can get, while the Germans are busy making a fortune out of it.

"Very well," said the ex-allyes, "suppose we agree on a total, and you Germans issue bonds for it. You can sell the bonds and give us the money. Out of it we will pay the United States and everything will be lovely."

The Germans were willing. It is to fix the total amount of reparations that the coming negotiations were called—the ones Uncle Sam is urged to take a hand in.

"But," as some curious person, "who is to buy the German bonds?"—enabling Germany to pay the ex-allyes, enabling them, in turn, to pay Uncle Samuel.

"Why, Uncle Sam will buy the bonds, of course," reply the ex-allyes.

And will Uncle Samuel buy them? You know he will. As Mr. Libby says, only a very silly bunch of debtor nations would go to war to cancel their obligations to such an uncle. It is so much simpler and pleasanter to spy him!

Then they proposed to assign their German reparations to America, settling everything that way. Unable to see why he should assume the burden of collecting a lot of doubtful reparations, as a substitute for money honestly dug him, Uncle Sam balked on that, too.

Meanwhile they continue to exact reparations regularly from Germany—on account of a total never definitely determined.

Finally this uncertainty began to prey on the German taxpayers' minds as to threaten an embarrassing situation—perhaps a collapse of German payments, the Germans quite reasonably arguing that maybe they could stand reparations, but they wanted to feel they were making some progress.

The Germans were willing. It is to fix the total amount of reparations that the coming negotiations were called—the ones Uncle Sam is urged to take a hand in.

Since that time the debtor nations have been racking their brains for some scheme to enrich the U. S. A. out of its 12 billions without frankly defaulting repayment, which they rightly judged would hurt their credit.

Meanwhile they continue to exact reparations regularly from Germany—on account of a total never definitely determined.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D., AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Before Operation

"I have a little son aged eight years, who, the doctors says, has a bad appendix that should come out. However, he never complains of a pain there and seems very lively and full of pep. When the doctor pressed on his right side, he jumped a little and therefore the doctor said his appendix was affected. He is taking a medicine before meals which the doctor prescribed for him. I don't want to have him operated on if I can possibly help it. Do you think it advisable to take him to another doctor, or have an X-ray taken?"

"My husband is under the impression that a person can never live longer than 15 years after the most after the appendix is taken out. Will you please advise me if there is any truth in this, which he says he read in a reliable magazine."

"MRS. E.—Before any serious operation that isn't urgent, a patient is invited in asking for a consultation with another surgeon. In your case, I would ask for a consultation with a children's specialist."

That a person cannot live longer than 15 years after the appendix is taken out, was not read in a reliable magazine, as your husband thinks, Mrs. E. It sounds like a cultist's or faddist's magazine. It is utter non-sense, no truth in it at all.

Mrs. E. has lost 45 pounds, but she is still too fat in the hips and thighs. What to do?

This unequal distribution of fat bothers a great many. The only thing to do, besides general reduction, is to take special exercise and massage for those parts (except the breasts). Good exercises for the hips are rolling and kicking, and brisk walking with long strides. You have to keep them up for a long time before you begin to see results. I know of a woman friend of mine who was overfat only around the hips. She took the kicking exercises—kicking back and forth and sideways—twice a day, in relays of 100; and in three months she had kicked off three inches. She found that the exercise improved her health. She did not need to diet.

Rolling is a splendid exercise. You can do this without becoming dizzy if you don't keep rolling over and over. Simply lie on your back and roll over until you are on your back again; then go back. In this way you automatically compress and massage your hips and abdomen. Our exercises for the trunk muscles will be effective. The trunk muscles are the most neglected muscles in the body, and they should be exercised vigorously every day because they are so vital.

Swimming is very good. Write in for our article on the Abdominal Wall and if you are in need of instructions on reducing, ask for our pamphlet on the subject.

M.—If you have catarrh with an inflammation of the nasal sinuses (the sinuses being located in the nose), undoubtedly that may be part of the cause of some of your halitosis. And the little pieces of whitish matter that you can press out of your tonsils most assuredly add more than a little. These little masses are decomposed material made up of the epithelial cells cast off from the tonsils, food debris and germs. You have what is known as cryptic tonsils. You should be taking treatments from a nose and throat specialist for both your troubles.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

What a cruel thing a laugh may be! Especially when one is young and sensitive. It may break a spirit more easily than a blow. One can return a blow, or an angry word. These are something one can fight. But when one is laughed at one is helpless. Any protest only increases the mirth. If one has a suspicion one is being laughed at, one's mouth is ruined. Even in the most poised person is susceptible to ridicule.

"DEAR MRS. LEE: I would like you to tell me what is the matter with me. I go to high school. I moved from the country two years ago and haven't a girl friend or boy. Now, Mrs. Lee, I don't know whether it is my clothes or what. They are good but not fancy. My folks won't let me run around nights. I mean they won't let me. And if they do I go with my 10-year-old brother. The girls and boys make fun of me and call me names. Mrs. Lee, I am so lonesome. My only companions are books. What is wrong with me? We live in the best part of town. I don't dance or play cards. I don't believe in necking. That is one reason why they don't like me. They make my life unhappy all the time. Some times I think I will quit school. But my folks want me to go through high school and be a nurse. Maybe they are cause I am funny. They say I am. Mrs. Lee, tell me what to do. LONESOME."

It is hard to know what to say, dear, without seeing you. It is thoughtlessness on the part of these young people, I am sure, not conscious cruelty, and surely not all your schoolmates do it. Are you sure you are not over sensitive? Most of us have felt we were the objects of their derision. The only thing to do is to ignore it and realize that only very ignorant and ill-bred people would treat anyone so. It is merely revealing their own lack of breeding. Incidentally, you can look yourself over and see if there is anything about your appearance that would amuse anyone. Do you always look what the beauty writers call well groomed? Immaculately clean, teeth and hair well brushed.

"PATSY." Why not talk to him some time, Patsy, and tell him your views. I don't believe he would be angry if you explained to him that it makes you feel silly. He may feel that you expect to "pet" as some girls do. It really is bad taste to make a show of affection in public. You are right on that point.

"DEAR MRS. LEE: I am a girl 15 years old and going with a boy 30. He comes and takes me to a show every other night. I take my sister with me because I don't like to go alone with him. But I don't like to have him come to see me because I have another boy friend. He lives so far away from me that he can't come to see me during the week. The first boy fought during the war and went across the sea, and mother says for me not to hurt his feelings. So please Mrs. Lee, tell me what to do.

"BENNY M." I don't think you should be compelled to go to the show with the man so often, Benny, even if he did fight in the war. He is too old for you to go with steadily. Can't you excuse yourself by saying you have been studying to do, without hurting his feelings? It would be better for him to get a girl friend nearer his own age. I think your mother should manage the matter for you.

Peter's Adventures

HORNED OWL, HOBGOBLIN!

Turkey spoke out of the side of his mouth, warning Peter. "Watch out for yourself, boy. I have all I can do to take care of myself now, and it is lucky if I come out with both eyes whole."

"Although, to tell the truth, I am beginning to think that it is the young Turks that 'Ghosts' is after. If he had been going to pick on any of us tough, old birds I am almost certain he would have begun before now."

"Well, of course, I am sure by this time that it isn't what I thought," said Peter, impatiently. "It looks like a hobgoblin, goodness knows, but what is it? Do tell me, Gobber, what is it?"

"Say, don't do that. Boy, it tickles me!" muttered Gobber. "Haven't I enough to worry about trying to take care of my eyes without you giving me hysterics?"

"If you were smart you would have guessed by this time who the creature is. It is Great Horned Owl—the worst enemy that we Turkeys have, and such a sneak!"

The terrible creature never does his fighting in the daytime, but steals upon us in the dark and strikes when we are most defenseless.

"Oooh, Duck, fellows, he is going to swoop."

With Troy High School as their foe, Xenia Central High School's undefeated "Buccaneers" will attempt to win their fifth consecutive basketball game and record their second straight Miami Valley League victory in the first road contest of the season on the Trojan floor Friday night.

In analyzing the chances of the Bucs in their opening invasion of strange floors, some compensating satisfaction is found in the fact that Piqua High experienced no difficulty in conquering the Trojans 20 to 12 on the Troy court last Friday night.

Piqua High will also play a league game Friday night and present indications are that the Piqua team, not content with sharing with Sidney a claim to superiority in the league in football during the 1928 season, may also have something to say about where the basketball wreath shall be awarded by the league this season.

Miamisburg, which surprised everybody including itself in losing out a one-point victory over Greenville last week, salutes to Piqua for a league encounter and will unquestionably have its budding championship hopes dimmed.

At present Xenia, Piqua and Miamisburg sit atop the league and for the moment at least no rival appears strong enough to argue about it.

The league season is barely started but the first three games would indicate that if there is any serious opposition to Xenia's march to its second consecutive championship, it will have to come from Piqua. Xenia and Piqua do not meet until February 21 on the Piqua floor and this game may very reasonably decide the title unless Sidney stages a comeback.

Xenia repelled Sidney, one of its leading challengers, by an easier margin than the 21 to 16 score would indicate last week.

The Buccaneers have had to battle this season in winning their first four games, three against non-league opponents. Only once has their margin of victory been greater than four points. The Bucs have recorded two two-point victories, one four-point win and one five-point victory.

Sidney and Greenville, which roost in the victory-less class in the league ladder, will be dallying with non-league foes Friday night with no particular advantage to themselves.

It was almost a foregone conclusion in well-informed circles that Sam S. Willaman would succeed Dr. John W. White, resigned, as head football coach at Ohio State University, although the athletic board gave out the information that nineteen other coaches had received consideration for the post.

Clyde Tuttle, a leading Columbus sport writer, points out that it is too much to expect that the appointment of Willaman will meet with universal approbation.

"That is too much to expect because Willaman has been so closely identified with the Ohio State football administration for the last three years, there was bound to be some opposition to his appointment."

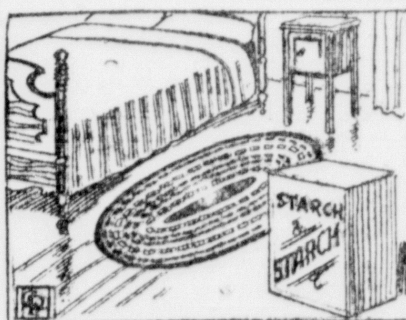

Regardless of whether his appointment is popular the fact remains that Willaman's job for the last three years has been no bed of roses.

"It would be hard to imagine how anyone could have handled in better fashion the delicate situation which confronted Willaman."

"Now that his appointment has been promulgated in official form, well-wishers of Ohio State should co-operate with him in every way to make his football administration a successful one."

"His selection of his two chief assistants (one is going on the assumption that House will come here as line coach and Don Miller as backfield coach) should give State three distinct types of football for consideration. If Willaman and his aids can clean the best in each type Buckeye football in 1929 should be different."

Annual Sport Review-1928

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

1928 NOVEMBER 1928

MON. TUE. WED. THU. FRI.

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Sports Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

Baseball trades were the order of the day in November, being especially conspicuous because of the many managerial shifts.

Rogers Hornsby, the much-traded gentleman, who last season managed the Boston Braves, was sold to the Chicago Cubs.

Tris Speaker, one of Connie Mack's veterans, and a former Boston Red Sox and Cleveland outfielder, signed a two-year contract to manage the Newark Internationals, replacing Walter Johnson, who in October was signed to manage the Senators, his old team.

Ray Schalk, released as manager of the Cubs, signed with the New York Giants. John McGraw plans using him as assistant manager. Billy Southworth, manager of the Rochester Internationals, and Manager Bill McKechnie, of the St. Louis Cardinals, exchanged jobs. Both had won pennants in their respective leagues in the past season.

It was the brilliant month for football, upsets continuing to be the order of the day. November saw the first of the west coast's victories over eastern college teams. New York U. had been backed as the favorite to win over the Oregon Aggies in an interesting game at New York on Thanksgiving Day, by virtue of their victories over Missouri and the hitherto unbeaten Carnegie Tech team. But the dope was wrong. Oregon's 25 to 13 whipping of the easterners proved their superiority. Illinois again won the Big Ten title by defeating Ohio State, 8 to 0, at Columbus.

On November 20 there were three startling upsets in the prize ring. At Detroit, Jimmy McLarnin, one of the leading lightweight contenders, was pasted unmercifully by Ray Miller. At Boston, on the same evening, Johnny Risko, though by no means a great heavyweight, was taking a beating from the remains of Jim Maloney, over whom he was picked as the favorite. New York saw the other upset, with Tuffy Griffiths, regarded as one of the greatest fighters in the ring, and with fifty-five consecutive victories behind him, taking a knockout in two rounds from the practically unknown Jimmy Braddock.

NOV. 3—Ohio State and Princeton played a 6 to 6 tie; University of Southern California defeated Stanford 10 to 0; Georgia Tech swamped Oglethorpe 32 to 0 and Georgetown pulled a 7 to 0 surprise over New York University in the days of important games.

NOV. 5—Paulino, the Basque wood chopper, pounded out a 16-round victory over Otto Von Porat, Norwegian heavyweight, at New York.

NOV. 6—West Virginia University defeated Fordham at New York, 18 to 0.

NOV. 7—Rogers Hornsby, the greatest right-handed batter in the major leagues, and last season manager of the Boston Braves, was sold to the Chicago Cubs.

NOV. 8—Johnny Risko outpointed Tuffy Griffiths in a 10-round heavyweight battle at Fremont, O.

NOV. 10—Notre Dame surprised the Army, 12 to 6; Iowa defeated Ohio State, 14 to 7; Florida smothered Georgia, 26 to 6; Harvard beat Pennsylvania, 7 to 0 and California scored a 6 to 0 victory over Washington.

NOV. 11—Tris Speaker, veteran outfielder, signed a two-year contract to manage the Newark Internationals league club.

NOV. 12—Ray Schalk, former Chicago catcher and manager, signed with the New York Giants to act as assistant to John McGraw.

NOV. 13—Tex Rickard made another futile attempt to induce Jack Dempsey back into the ring by offering him a $437,000 guarantee.

NOV. 17—A few of the important games of the day resulted in a victory for Carnegie Tech over Notre Dame, 27 to 7; Illinois defeated Chicago, 40 to 0; Princeton defeated Yale, 12 to 2; New York U. turned back Missouri, 27 to 6; Stanford beat Washington 12 to 0; Georgia Tech continued to win in the south, 33 to 13 over Alabama.

NOV. 18—Joey Ray, for the third time defeated El Ouali, the Algerian, in a marathon at Chicago.

NOV. 20—The New York State Athletic Association warned Tommy Loughran that he cannot hold his light heavyweight title if he insists on mixing with the heavies.

NOV. 21—Billy Southworth replaced Bill McKechnie as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals. McKechnie in turn was sent to take Southworth's place as pilot of the Rochester International league club.

NOV. 24—Illinois retained the Big Ten title by defeating Ohio State, 8 to 0. New York U. pulled a big surprise by outclassing the powerful Carnegie Tech eleven, 27 to 13. Stanford and California battled to a 13 to 13 tie.

NOV. 26—Jimmie Reid, Harvard runner, won the intercollegiate A. A. A. cross-country championship run at Van Courtland Park, N. Y.

NOV. 29—The Oregon Aggies upset the New York University eleven in a great intercollegiate battle in New York, 25 to 13. Many colleges completed their football season.

NOV. 30—Ray Miller stopped Jimmy McLarnin at Detroit; Jim Maloney outshouted Johnny Risko at Boston, and Jimmy Braddock knocked Tuffy Griffiths out of the picture at New York—three sensational upsets.

WILMINGTON WINS

WILMINGTON, O., Jan. 18.—Wilmington College nosed out Rio Grande, 26 to 22 in a tight game here last night. The basket quitters were evenly matched and each was strong at guarding. The score was tied six times during the game.

THE LIFE OF TEX RICKARD

CHAPTER VII

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

United Press Staff Correspondent

Jack Kearns "sold" Jack Dempsey to Rickard. The promoter always thought Dempsey was too small before he won the championship.

Just exactly when and where Rickard and Dempsey first met is not clear. Dempsey said the other day that he first met Rickard at Goldfield in 1911, but it is doubtful if Rickard was in Goldfield at that time.

"I was just a kid at that time and I doubt if Rickard remembered meeting me at all," Dempsey said. Anyway, Rickard first began to hear of Dempsey as a prizefighter around 1918, under the management of Jack Kearns.

"This kid is the next world's champion," Kearns told everyone who would listen to him. Dempsey was matched with Fred Fulton, the Minnesota plasterer, and scored one of the quickest knockouts on record.

Now Kearns started his campaign for a Dempsey-Willard match. Jack Curley who had promoted the Dempsey-Fulton match, was too busy with other things to listen to Kearns and finally Kearns got Rickard interested.

"Dempsey's too small for Willard," Rickard kept telling Kearns, even after he made up his mind to attempt to promote the bout. Rickard wanted to stage the bout in New York City, but decision bouts were illegal in New York state at that time. Rickard was looking around for a site when Ad Thatcher, Toledo promoter, came to New York. He persuaded Rickard that Toledo was the logical place to hold the fight.

Rickard signed Willard for a $100,000 guarantee. Dempsey was signed to fight Willard for $27,000.

Dempsey's size (he weighed around 180 in those days) continued to perplex Rickard even after the fighters started training for the bout. Willard weighed 245.

"Kid, you look awfully small to me," Rickard said to Dempsey, "do you really think you can lick him?"

The fight was held July 4, 1919. The giant Willard was slashed to pieces by the tigerish Dempsey. Willard was counted out in the first round but the bell sounded before the referee completed his count. Dempsey, who had left the ring, was brought back and he hammered Willard to submission in the next round. Willard's seconds tossed in the sponge when the bell rang for the third round as Willard was too weak to assume a fighting position.

The receipts of the Dempsey-Willard bout were $452,522, and Rickard made a profit of about $100,000 after he had paid all expenses.

Rickard and Dempsey rode to fame together. Kearns played a major role at the start, but he later drifted out of the picture when he split with Dempsey. Rickard promoted all but two of Dempsey's fights for the title.

In the seven bouts which Rickard promoted with Dempsey as a principal the receipts totaled $9,164,861.82.

After Dempsey's split with Kearns late in 1923, Dempsey turned to Rickard as his adviser, and asked Rickard to become his manager, but Tex turned him down.

Nevertheless, Rickard was frequently accused of managing Dempsey. Jack Sharkey openly charged Rickard with being Dempsey's manager shortly before the promoter's death. Rickard merely laughed at Sharkey's accusations and said:

"It's good publicity."

The Buccaneers have had to battle this season in winning their first four games, three against non-league opponents. Only once has their margin of victory been greater than four points. The Bucs have recorded two two-point victories, one four-point win and one five-point victory.

Sidney and Greenville, which meet in the victory-less class in the league ladder, will be rallying with non-league foes Friday night with no particular advantage to themselves.

It was almost a foregone conclusion in well-informed circles that Sam S. Willaman would succeed Dr. John W. Wilce, resigned, as head football coach at Ohio State University, although the athletic board gave out the information that nineteen other coaches had received consideration for the post.

Clyde Tuttle, a leading Columbus sport writer, points out that it is too much to expect that the appointment of Willaman will meet with universal approbation.

"That is too much to expect because Willaman has been so closely identified with the Ohio State football administration for the last three years, there was bound to be some opposition to his appointment."

"Regardless of whether his appointment is popular the fact remains that Willaman's job for the last three years has been no bed of roses."

"It would be hard to imagine how anyone could have handled in better fashion the delicate situation which confronted Willaman."

"Now that his appointment has been promulgated in official form, well-wishers of Ohio State should co-operate with him in every way to make his football administration a successful one."

"His selection of his two chief assistants (we are going on the assumption that Hauser will come here as line coach and Don Miller as backfield coach) should give State three distinct types of football for consideration. If Willaman and his aids can clean the best in each type of college football in 1929 should be different."

Annual Sport Review-1928

1928 NOVEMBER 1928

MON. TUE. WED. THU. FRI.

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Sports Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

Baseball trades were the order of the day in November, being especially conspicuous because of the many managerial shifts.

Rogers Hornsby, the much-traded gentleman, who last season managed the Boston Braves, was sold to the Chicago Cubs.

Tris Speaker, one of Connie Mack's veterans, and a former Boston Red Sox and Cleveland outfielder, signed a two-year contract to manage the Newark Internationals, replacing Walter Johnson, who in October was signed to manage the Senators, his old team.

Ray Schalk, released as manager of the Cubs, signed with the New York Giants. John McGraw plans using him as assistant manager.

Billy Southworth, manager of the Rochester Internationals, and Manager Bill McKechnie, of the St. Louis Cardinals, exchanged jobs.

Both had won pennants in their respective leagues in the past season.

It was the brilliant month for football, upsets continuing to be the order of the day. November saw the first of the west coast's victories over eastern college teams.

New York U. had been backed as the favorite to win over the Oregon Aggies in an intercollegiate battle in New York on Thanksgiving Day, by virtue of their victories over Missouri and the hitherto unbeaten Carnegie Tech team.

But the dope was wrong. Oregon's 25 to 13 whipping of the easterners proved their superiority. Illinois again won the Big Ten title by defeating Ohio State, 8 to 0, at Columbus.

On November 30 there were three startling upsets in the prize ring. At Detroit, Jimmy McLarnin, one of the leading lightweight contenders, was pasted unmercifully by Ray Miller. At Boston, on the same evening, Johnny Risko, though by no means a great heavyweight, was taking a beating from the remains of Jim Maloney, over whom he was picked as the favorite.

New York saw the other upset, with Tuffy Griffiths, regarded as one of the greatest fighters in the ring, and with fifty-five consecutive victories behind him, taking a knockout in two rounds from the practically unknown Jimmy Braddock.

NOV. 3—Ohio State and Princeton played a 6 to 6 tie; University of Southern California defeated Stanford 10 to 0; Georgia Tech swamped Oglethorpe 32 to 0 and Georgetown pulled a 7 to 0 surprise over New York University in the days of important games.

NOV. 5—Paulino, the Basque wood chopper, pounded out a 10-round victory over Otto Von Porat, Norwegian heavyweight, at New York.

NOV. 6—West Virginia University defeated Fordham at New York, 8 to 0.

NOV. 7—Rogers Hornsby, the greatest right-handed batter in the major leagues, and last season manager of the Boston Braves, was sold to the Chicago Cubs.

NOV. 8—Johnny Risko outpointed Tut Jackson in a 10-round heavyweight battle at Fremont, O.

NOV. 10—Naze Dame surprised the Army, 12 to 6; Iowa defeated Ohio State, 14 to 7; Florida smothered Georgia, 26 to 6; Harvard beat Pennsylvania, 7 to 3 and California scored a 6 to 0 victory over Washington.

NOV. 11—Tris Speaker, veteran outfielder, signed a two-year contract to manage the Newark International league club.

NOV. 12—Ray Schalk, former Chicago catcher and manager, signed with the New York Giants to act as assistant to John McGraw.

NOV. 13—Tex Rickard made another futile attempt to induce Jack Dempsey back into the ring by offering him a $437,000 guarantee.

NOV. 17—A few of the important games of the day resulted in a victory for Carnegie Tech over Notre Dame, 27 to 7; Illinois defeated Chicago, 40 to 9; Princeton defeated Yale, 12 to 2; New York U. turned back Missouri, 27 to 6; Stanford beat Washington 12 to 0; Georgia Tech continued to win in the south, 33 to 10 over Alabama.

NOV. 18—Joey Ray, for the third time defeated El Ouali, the Algerian, in a marathon at Chicago.

NOV. 20—The New York State Athletic Association warned Tommy Louhran that he cannot hold his light heavyweight title if he insists on mixing with the heavies.

NOV. 21—Billy Southworth replaced Bill McKechnie as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals. McKechnie in turn was sent to take Southworth's place as pilot of the Rochester International league club.

NOV. 24—Illinois retained the Big Ten title by defeating Ohio State 8 to 0. New York U. pulled a big surprise by outclassing the powerful Carnegie Tech eleven, 27 to 13. Stanford and California battled to a 13 to 13 tie.

NOV. 26—Jimmie Reid, Harvard runner, won the intercollegiate A. A. A. cross-country championship run at Van Courtland Park, N. Y.

NOV. 29—The Oregon Aggies upset the New York University eleven in a great intercollegiate battle in New York, 25 to 13. Many colleges completed their football season.

NOV. 30—Ray Miller stopped Jimmy McLarnin at Detroit; Jim Maloney outshouted Johnny Risko at Boston, and Jimmy Braddock knocked Tuffy Griffiths out of the picture at New York—three sensational upsets.

THE LIFE OF TEX RICKARD

Being A Colorful Account Of One Of America's Most Colorful Characters

Editor's Note: The following is the seventh chapter of "The Life of Tex Rickard."

"THE LIFE OF TEX RICKARD"

CHAPTER VII
By GEORGE KIRKSEY
United Press Staff CorrespondentCopyright 1929, By United Press
Jack Kearns "sold" Jack Dempsey to Rickard. The promoter always thought Dempsey was too small before he won the championship.

Just exactly when and where Rickard and Dempsey first met is not clear. Dempsey said the other day that he first met Rickard at Goldfield in 1911, but it is doubtful if Rickard was in Goldfield at that time.

"I was just a kid at that time and I doubt if Rickard remembered meeting me at all," Dempsey said. Anyway, Rickard first began to hear of Dempsey as a prizefighter around 1918, under the management of Jack Kearns.

"This kid is the next world's champion," Kearns told everyone who would listen to him. Dempsey was matched with Fred Fulton, the Minnesota plasterer, and scored one of the quickest knockouts on record.

Now Kearns started his campaign for a Dempsey-Willard match. Jack Curley who had promoted the Dempsey-Fulton match, was too busy with other things to listen to Kearns, and finally Kearns got Rickard interested.

"Dempsey's too small for Willard," Rickard kept telling Kearns, even after he made up his mind to attempt to promote the bout.

Rickard wanted to stage the bout in New York City, but decision bouts were illegal in New York state at that time. Rickard was looking around for a site when Ad Thatcher, Toledo promoter, came to New York. He persuaded Rickard that Toledo was the logical place to hold the fight.

Rickard signed Willard for a $100,000 guarantee. Dempsey was signed to fight Willard for $27,000.

Dempsey's size (he weighed around 130 in those days) continued to perplex Rickard even after the fighters started training for the bout. Willard weighed 245.

"Kid, you look awfully small to me," Rickard said to Dempsey, "do you really think you can lick him?"

The fight was held July 4, 1919. The giant Willard was slashed to pieces by the tigerish Dempsey. Willard was counted out in the first round but the bell sounded before the referee completed his count. Dempsey, who had left the ring, was brought back and he hammered Willard to submission in the next round. Willard's seconds tossed in the sponge when the bell rang for the third round as Willard was too weak to assume a fighting position.

The receipts of the Dempsey-Willard bout were $452,522, and Rickard made a profit of about $100,000 after he had paid all expenses.

Rickard and Dempsey rode to fame together. Kearns played a major role at the start, but he later drifted out of the picture when he split with Dempsey.

Rickard promoted all but two of Dempsey's fights for the title. In the seven bouts which Rickard promoted with Dempsey as a principal the receipts totaled $9,164,861.82.

After Dempsey's split with Kearns late in 1923, Dempsey turned to Rickard as his adviser, and asked Rickard to become his manager, but Tex turned him down.

Nevertheless, Rickard was frequently accused of managing Dempsey. Jack Sharkey openly charged Rickard with being Dempsey's manager shortly before the promoter's death. Rickard merely laughed at Sharkey's accusations and said:

"It's good publicity."

Above are some of the principals in the murder trial of Willard R. Harsh, of Milwaukee, former Oglethorpe university student, charged with the murder of Willard Smith, drug store clerk, and S. H. Meeks, grocery clerk. The state elected to try Richard Gallogly, also charged with the crimes, later. The trial of Harsh has just opened at Atlanta. (1) Mrs. Willard Smith, wife of the murdered man; (2) Smith; (3) Walter Colquitt, (4) James A. Branch, (5) William Schley Howard, defense attorneys; (6) Harsh; (7) Solicitor General John A. Boykin, the prosecutor; (8) the courthouse and scene of the trial; (9) Judge E. D. Thomas, trial judge.

Praises His Predecessor

"His was an excellent administration." In this wise and Governor Frank G. Allen, of Massachusetts, refers to Governor Fuller, his predecessor, in first interview with newspapermen following his inauguration. He is shown at his desk in the capitol.

BEAUTIES CAUSE ROGERS WORRY

When it comes to solving national and international questions of politics and diplomacy Will Rogers, cowboy humorist, of Claremore, Okla., never admits himself stumped, but the young women, above, frankly have him worried, as his photo above indicates. It is his job to decide which is the fairest co-ed of the Oklahoma A. and M. college at Stillwater. Above are four of the campus beauties. Christ had been telling the disciples of coming persecutions and of his having to leave them, the sad news of this being balanced by the good news of the provision for strength, guidance, and comfort in the coming of God in a holy personality without form, the Holy Spirit.

V. 7. "It is expedient for you that I go away for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you." Soul development like mental development comes from the proper activity encouraged and properly directed by a superior personality.

V. 8. "And he, when he is come, sin, and of righteousness, and of will convict the world in respect to judgment." Sin is essentially unbelief—before Christ came, unbelief in God; after Christ came, rejection of God's representative, the Holy Spirit through Christ's followers will prove that Christ was and is righteous and will prove that the condemnation pronounced by Christ is a picture of his judgment.

V. 12. "So then brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh." We owe the world nothing for it merely gives us death. We owe the Spirit everything for he gives us life.

V. 13. "If by the Spirit ye put to death the deeds of the body, ye shall live." There are two sides to our nature, the earthward side, the flesh, controlled by appetites and base desires and earnestly responds to the will of God which is rewarded by a new life.

V. 14. "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are the sons of God." The test of the Christian life is the Spirit of Christ. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

V. 15. "For ye received not the spirit of bondage again to fear." Before the Holy Spirit enters the soul, there is a slavery to fear, dreading God as a stern judge.

V. 16. "The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." One may have the experiences of a god within, the best impulses, the holy desires, the pure motives.

V. 17. "In like manner the Spirit helpeth our infirmities." The Holy Spirit becomes our intercessor. When He takes possession of the soul, the yearnings of the soul in effective prayer are properly directed in accordance with the will of God.

1. What would happen if our teachers and parents always remained with us?

2. What are the advantages of the Spirit's presence and work in the world compared with the personal presence of Christ?

3. What is the relation of the mind to the body?

5. How can a person be reasonably sure that he has the Spirit?

6. How may the church bring back the power of the Spirit?

ESSENTIALS TO SUCCESS

J. C. Penney says, "It is not cleverness or brilliance or great genius that are essential to success. Rather the price of success is industry, faith, confidence, and application. Any who are willing to pay this price can succeed."

"There is an idea that success is to be found in industrial centers. That is not so. Success is to be found where opportunity is, and that may be in the village quite as well as in the city."

"There is nothing magical about success. It is simply to recognize opportunity and diligently to apply oneself to the development of its fullest possibilities. And opportunity is not out there, tomorrow or next year, but right here and now under one's very nose and ever present."

"I am convinced that one succeeds only in proportion as he helps others succeed. If I had to do it all over again I would emphasize this creed of unselfishness even more than in the past."—D. Carl Yoder.

"What does the power of Sunday School music consist of?"

E. Morris Ferguson answers the question in substance as follows: "Too long has the power of Sunday School music been regarded in terms of a physical exercise often expressed in the words, 'Let all sing heartily.' In many cases singing has been so entered into physically as to make it difficult to relax the throat muscles in the interest of a sweet and resonant voice."

"Some regard singing as a social activity, the participants acting together with a mutual satisfaction and a feeling of happy solidarity. Something is to be said in favor of a school spirit produced by the united social expression in song."

"Real power of music is seen in the heart message it conveys to this message, the instrument, the composer, and the interpreting or accompanying musicians must each contribute to the association meaning each listening or singing heart will add something from its secret store."

2. What should music do for the school's educational program?

Surely it should give the school a pleasurable time. Music and joy go naturally together. Make music satisfy, and the effect will carry over into lessons and offerings and attendance and religious interests. It should furnish for chosen words an emotional setting; lesson values are deepened and carried into the heart-life by tunes wisely chosen. It should make its contribution to the materials of program teachings as touching the curriculum lessons, special days and seasons and special causes championed.

The Church Invites You

WHY NOT GO TO CHURCH?

Prof. Ozora S. Davis has described in the Christian Advocate his conception of the church in the following statements:

"Here, through beautiful services, I come close to God and to my human comrades in worship."

"Here in many ways I learn the truths by which I may live a brave, happy and useful life."

"Here I find comfort in my sorrow, courage in my struggle, joy in my victories."

"Here I come into union with Christ, my Master and Friend."

What is here stated as the expression of one man may be duplicated in thousands; some of your own friends will subscribe to this. Why not accept these statements and GO TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

At the League of Nations' Ninth Assembly a Religious Committee of one thousand was appointed to "read a new meaning into the declaration that 'war is an outlaw'." The committee will be composed of 250 Christians—Protestants and Catholics each to have 100 and the Eastern Catholic Church 50—75 Confucianists, 150 Buddhists, 100 Hindus, 60 Jews, 125 Mohammedans, 25 Jains, 25 Parsees, 50 Shintoists, 25 Sikhs, 25 Taoists and 90 miscellaneous. At a preliminary meeting arrangements were made for a Religious Peace Conference in 1930.

Almost three and a half million dollars has been appropriated by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church for its work in thirty-two countries during the coming year. The sum is the largest made in recent years by the Board. The largest appropriation will go for work in China, Japan and Korea.

Nearly $700,000 is bequeathed to Roman Catholic charitable organizations by the will of William J. Wharton, an old resident of the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn.

The Better Way

MEMORY

One of the greatest gifts to mankind is the faculty of memory. Memory is divine because by it we live again the scenes of long ago; once more we know "the touch of a vanished hand, and the sound of a voice that is still." Some memories pass away after a while, while others remain forever. Those that abide are the ones that we hold sacred because they stir in us the deepest and noblest emotions we have.

The words of the psalmist are true today, because the righteous are truly in "everlasting remembrance."

SPECIAL MUSIC AT TRINITY CHURCH

Special music for the men's service at Trinity M. E. Church on Sunday evening, 10:45. Text: "Ye have wearied Jehovah with your words. Yet ye say, wherein have we wearied him?" Malachi 2:17.

FLAN DRAMATIC HYMN SERVICE

A dramatic hymn service given by the choir will be a feature of the opening exercises of the Sunday evening service at the Friends Church. By the use of old familiar hymns and pantomime the way of salvation will be clearly portrayed.

WHY NOT GO TO CHURCH?

Prof. Ozora S. Davis has described in the Christian Advocate his conception of the church in the following statements:

"Here, through beautiful services, I come close to God and to my human comrades in worship."

"Here in many ways I learn the truths by which I may live a brave, happy and useful life."

"Here I find comfort in my sorrow, courage in my struggle, joy in my victories."

"Here I come into union with Christ, my Master and Friend."

What is here stated as the expression of one man may be duplicated in thousands; some of your own friends will subscribe to this. Why not accept these statements and GO TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

Busiest Woman in Capital "Boss" Hanna's Daughter

Illinois Congressman
Opens Offices, Gets
Down to Work

By SHIRLEY KIRKE

WASHINGTON (IIN).—No busier person can be found anywhere in the national capital than Mrs. Medill McCormick, known politically as Ruth Hanna McCormick. Elected to Congress as representative-at-large from Illinois, she already has opened a suite of offices here to take care of the large volume of business pouring in with every mail.

"The people of my State seem to think that now they've elected me they are going to put me to work right away," she explained. "Apparently it doesn't matter that my term of office hasn't yet actually begun. I'm just an added workman they have in Washington—and, I must say, I like it."

She's a Kentucky Colonel. To her other distinctions, Mrs. McCormick recently added the colorful title of "Kentucky Colonel." She has just been made a colonel on the staff of Governor Flem Sampson of the Blue Grass State, although it was a neighboring State that has sent her to Congress.

Not long ago she made a speech in Louisville in which she declared her conviction that the time is ripe for placing a woman in a Cabinet post, because women are not yet sufficiently trained or fitted for such a responsible position.

Mrs. McCormick is considered one of the most "politically minded" women in the country, having from childhood been grounded in the study of politics and government in the home of her famous father, the late Mark Hanna. And later, as the wife of another Senator of distinction, she was able to advance her knowledge many fold.

Chum of "Princess Alice"

So that her statement about women in the Cabinet is taken to be, if not prophetic, at least indicative of what the best political minds probably think on the subject.

Mrs. McCormick is well known in social circles in the capital, having resided here for protracted periods throughout many years. Her "best friend" probably is Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, wife of the Speaker of the House.

"Ruth" and "Alice," as they are affectionately known, are "buddies" par excellence and stars at any political salon they happen to attend.

CHAPTER LII

"Well, the first thing to do with a man like Larry who faces certain failure unless he turns right about face, is to make his dealings strictly a matter of business. Families should never borrow from each other, anyway. So I arranged the loan for him," finished Mr. Polk, avoiding Byrd's eyes.

"Why, Mr. Polk," she said, aghast, "Why did you take such a risk?"

"In spite of all the gossip to the contrary, bankers often take a chance when something more than money is at stake!"

Byrd was very still for a few minutes.

Then she handed Mr. Polk an envelope.

"Will you return this to Larry?" she asked. "It's a check he sent me. Please thank him for me, and tell him that I am making a very good salary and can get along nicely."

Then she leaned a little closer, as if they were engrossed in the most intimate conversation.

"I was a darn fool."

Martin saw a young man start toward them from across the room. When he was within a few feet of their table, he wheeled about and shot out of the door.

"Why, that's the fellow that spoke to you this morning," he said, surprised. "Do you know him?"

"My husband!" said Byrd, quietly. "I was acting for his benefit!"

Martin looked at her musingly. "He's gaga about you, too," he added, as if he had made the remark to himself. "He would be."

"He's gaga about himself!" she said, scornfully.

Martin drove Byrd to the Semcoff class.

"Drive down with me in the morning!" he asked, coaxingly. But Byrd shook her head.

On the following Monday night, Fred stopped at the bank for her. Pat and Chet and she were going to the Obermans for dinner.

As they went through the big glass door of the bank, the noise of the newsboys calling the evening papers seemed unusually strident, and as they stepped out on the sidewalk they were immediately surrounded by a tattered demagogue crew that swarmed like bumble bees around them.

It seemed as if fifty voices beat upon her ear drums at the same time. The air seemed to be hanging in tatters torn to shreds by their shrill, piercing cries.

Fred bought two papers and thrust one into her hands.

The same feeling of foreboding seemed to strike each simultaneously.

The same thought swung through their minds: "It's Jack Duncan!"

Byrd heard the clatter of the two-wheeled wagons drawn by wiry little nags as they tore back and forth across the street, leaving the special editions at every corner.

She hurriedly opened her paper. Across the front page, in huge, black type, ran the words:

HILLDALE AND SUNSET
POINT REALTY CO. OFFERS STOCKS

Stockholder, in Petition, Charges President and Directors With Fraud.

Suit for $7,999.25 was filed Saturday in Common Pleas court by John Goldman, 3222 W. 42d Street, seeking to recover from directors of the Hilldale and Sunset Point Realty Co. funds deposited in partial payment for the company's stocks. Goldman's petition charged John Duncan and eight directors of the company with fraud in the sale of stocks.

The petition filed by Attorney Gerhart also laid before the directors a series of 30 interrogatories they are required to answer, and which delve into the details of the management of the company.

Byrd read the article through to the end.

"Oh, Fred, how simply terrible," she managed to gasp.

He nodded.

"Certainly going to be tough on Jack. It means a penitentiary sentence, sure." He turned a worried face toward Byrd. "There's a rumor that Larry's one of the directors and will come into the investigation, too."

A tremor passed through Byrd's body and fear held her mute.

"Larry doesn't own one cent's worth of stock. If he had been a director I think Mr. Polk would have seen to it that his name was struck off."

But the idea stalked through her mind. She couldn't throw off the growing suspicion that Larry must be involved, after all.

The chief topic at the dinner table was Jack.

"Oh, why do men with a grain of sense do these things?" wailed Byrd.

"Always the temptation of getting rich quick," said Chet. "It's the bottom of every slightly questionable venture."

"Now, if you're going to spoil my dinner by talking about nasty things," pouted Tiny, "I'm going to bed."

"This is some dinner, Tiny," said Chet, with a mammoth chunk of peach cobbler topped with whipped cream poised on the end of his fork. "Pat runs what I call 'The Dairy Lunch Counter' at our house. Her idea of a filling meal is a glass of milk and fried eggs or a glass of milk and poached eggs or a glass of milk and—"

"Oh you potato chip. I'll fix you for that!" and in a minute Pat had both hands in Chet's sandy-colored hair. "Say you're sorry!"

"Sorry," he said, removing her two little fists. "And long may she wave."

Then went into the living room for after dinner coffee.

"This is the only thing that Fred won't get used to," giggled Tiny.

"Bring mine in a pint measure or the cocktail shaker," Fred directed the maid.

"Listen everybody," twittered Tiny

Busiest Woman in Capital "Boss" Hanna's Daughter

Illinois Congressman
Opens Offices, Gets
Down to Work

By SHIRLEY KIRKE

WASHINGTON (IIN).—No busier person can be found anywhere in the national capital than Mrs. Medill McCormick, known politically as Ruth Hanna McCormick. Elected to Congress as representative-at-large from Illinois, she already has opened a suite of offices here to take care of the large volume of business pouring in with every mail.

"The people of my State seem to think that now they've elected me they are going to put me to work right away," she explained. "Apparently it doesn't matter that my term of office hasn't yet actually begun. I'm just an added workman they have in Washington—and, I must say, I like it."

She's a Kentucky Colonel. To her other distinctions, Mrs. McCormick recently added the colorful title of "Kentucky Colonel." She has just been made a colonel on the staff of Governor Flem Sampson of the Blue Grass State, although it was a neighboring State that has sent her to Congress.

Not long ago she made a speech in Louisville in which she declared her conviction that the time is not ripe for placing a woman in a Cabinet post, because women are not yet sufficiently trained nor fitted for such a responsible position. Her "best friend" probably is Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, wife of the Speaker of the House.

"Ruth" and "Alice," as they are affectionately known, are "buddies" par excellence and stars at any political salon they happen to attend.

So that her statement about women in the Cabinet is taken to be, if not prophetic, at least indicative of what the best political minds probably think on the subject.

Mrs. McCormick is well known in social circles in the capital, having resided here for protracted periods throughout many years. Her "best friend" probably is Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, wife of the Speaker of the House.

CHAPTER LII

"Well, the first thing to do with a man like Larry who faces certain failure unless he turns right about face, is to make his dealings strictly a matter of business. Families should never borrow from each other, anyway. So I arranged the loan for him," finished Mr. Polk, avoiding Byrd's eyes.

"Why, Mr. Polk," she said, aghast, "Why did you take such a risk?"

"In spite of all the gossip to the contrary, bankers often take a chance when something more than money is at stake!"

Byrd was very still for a few minutes.

Then she handed Mr. Polk an envelope.

"Will you return this to Larry?" she asked. "It's a check he sent me. Please thank him for me, and tell him that I am making a very good salary and can get along nicely."

Byrd hurried out of the building that evening, for she had planned to meet Pat at the dancing class.

Outside the bank she bought a paper, and stood for a minute glancing over the front page.

Jack Duncan's name caught her eyes. A small item at the bottom of the page stated that John R. Duncan, prominent banker, had been fined one hundred dollars and costs on a charge of assault and battery.

She started walking rapidly down Euclid avenue, enjoying the late October air. The evening was as balmy as any day in summer.

She glanced up. Coming toward her, she saw Martin Kelly.

"You're as bad as a bad penny!" she scolded him laughingly, "always turning up at the wrong time."

"I'm glad to see you, too," he said, showing his white, even teeth, his only asset in the way of beauty. "Going home?"

Byrd decided not to tell him she was having dinner alone. She was afraid he'd come, to. She maintained a discreet silence, for he didn't know her given name.

"Please tell me your first name."

"I'll tell it to you, but of course, you can't use it. You can't call a married woman by her given name," said Byrd, sharply. "It's Byrd."

"Byrd's a lovely name. I never heard it before," he said, holding the name lingeringly on his tongue.

Then he took her arm and started to steer her toward a restaurant.

"Byrd, this is where we're going to eat."

Byrd hesitated.

"Well," she relented, "this is the last time. I can't be seen eating around town with strange young men."

"Gosh, I was lonesome," he said, as they seated themselves at the rather dingy table. "I'll confess! I'm just getting over a love affair and my heart is still a little weak. With sunshine and a smile or two from you, my doctor thinks I'll be completely cured in a very short time."

He beamed at her across the table.

Before the dinner was over Byrd had succeeded in getting the story.

He had been engaged for five years to an Irish girl on their street, whose father had suddenly made a lot of money in plumbing fixtures.

"She got awfully impatient, and I don't blame her," he continued. "But I told her I wouldn't get married until I had paid back every cent that I had borrowed to put me through school. So she married her father's partner last month."

Martin drew his lips into a hard, knotty line.

"Oh, how terrible!" said Byrd, laying her hand impulsively on Martin's arm.

Then she started to say something but her words dried in her throat.

She had glanced up across the room, her hand still across the table touching Martin's coat sleeve, and encountered Larry's eyes fastened on her.

Quickly she withdrew her hand, but she kept staring at Larry.

He looked as if he had seen a ghost.

Byrd turned a scoffing face toward Martin.

"Would you let one girl make a mess of your life?" she said, impatiently.

He looked at her a little dumbfounded. In the twinkling of an eye, Byrd had changed from a quiet, sweet girl into a pert, mocking young miss.

"Well, you did," he answered, soberly.

"I did," she said, emphatically, "with a reckless note in her voice. 'I broke my heart over a husband who treated me as a household chattel. I was just a liability hanging around his neck. The good old albatross had nothing on me!'"

She laughed flippantly.

Then she leaned a little closer, as if they were engrossed in the most intimate conversation.

"I was a darn fool!"

Martin saw a young man start toward them from across the room. When he was within a few feet of their table, he wheeled about and shot out of the door.

"Why, that's the fellow that spoke to you this morning," he said, surprised. "Do you know him?"

"My husband!" said Byrd, quietly. "I was acting for his benefit!"

Martin looked at her musingly. "He's gaga about you, too," he added, as if he had made the remark to himself. "He would be."

"He's gaga about himself!" she said, scornfully.

Martin drove Byrd to the Semanoff class.

"Drive down with me in the morning?" he asked, coaxingly. But Byrd shook her head.

On the following Monday night, Fred stopped at the bank for her. Pat and Chet and she were going to the Obermans for dinner.

As they went through the big, glass door of the bank, the noise of the newsboys calling the evening papers seemed unusually strident, and as they stepped out on the sidewalk they were immediately surrounded by a tatterdemalion crew that swarmed like bumble bees around them.

It seemed as if fifty voices beat upon her ear drums at the same time. The air seemed to be hanging in tatters torn to shreds by their shrill, piercing cries.

Fred bought two papers and thrust one into her hands.

The same feeling of foreboding seemed to strike each simultaneously.

The same thought swung through their minds. "It's Jack Duncan!"

Byrd heard the clatter of the two-wheeled wagons drawn by wiry little nags as they tore back and forth across the street, leaving the special editions at every corner.

She hurriedly opened her paper. Across the front page, in huge, black type, ran the words:

HILLDALE AND SUNSET POINT REALTY CO. OFFICERS SUE

Stockholder, in Petition, Charges President and Directors With Fraud.

Suit for $7,300.35 was filed Saturday in Common Pleas Court by John Goldman, 2222 W. 42d Street, seeking to recover from directors of the Hilldale and Sunset Point Realty Co. funds deposited in partial payment for the company's stocks. Goldman's petition charged John Duncan and eight directors of the company with fraud in the sale of stocks.

The petition filed by Attorney Gerhart also laid before the directors a series of 30 interrogatories they are required to answer, and which delve into the details of the management of the company.

Byrd read the article through to the end.

"Oh, Fred, how simply terrible!" she managed to gasp.

He nodded.

"Certainly going to be tough on Jack. It means a penitentiary sentence, sure." He turned a worried face toward Byrd. "There's a rumor that Larry's one of the directors and will come into the investigation, too."

A tremor passed through Byrd's body and fear held her mute.

"Larry doesn't own one cent's worth of stock. If he had been a director, I think Mr. Polk would have seen to it that his name was struck off."

But the idea stalked through her mind. She couldn't throw off the growing suspicion that Larry must be involved, after all.

The chief topic at the dinner table was Jack.

"Oh, why do men with a grain of sense do these things?" wailed Byrd.

"Always the temptation of getting rich quick," said Chet. "It's the bottom of every slightly questionable venture."

"Now, if you're going to spoil my dinner by talking about nasty things," pointed Tiny. "I'm going to bed."

"This is some dinner, Tiny," said Chet, with a mammoth chunk of peach cobbler topped with whipped cream poised on the end of his fork. "Pat runs what I call 'The Dairy Lunch Counter' at our house. Her idea of a filling meal is a glass of milk and fried eggs or a glass of milk and poached eggs or a glass of milk and—"

"Oh you potato chip, I'll fix you for that!" and in a minute Pat had both hands in Chet's sandy-colored hair. "Say you're sorry!"

"Sorry!" he said, removing her two little fists. "And long may she wave!"

Then went into the living room for after dinner coffee.

"This is the only thing that Fred won't get used to," giggled Byrd.

"Bring mine in a pint measure or the cocktail shaker," Fred directed the maid.

"Listen everybody," twittered Tiny, "we're giving a fancy dress party a week from Saturday night. Won't it be too cute for anything?"

Fred's three chins quivered.

The Theater

It's beginning to look like old Home Week around the cinema studios now as sound pictures are bringing back to the fold many former film stars who deserted the celluloid for the stage.

Sound synchronizing pictures have made it essential that movie players speak English without a barbershop accent. The call has gone out along Broadway, through the vaudeville circuits and the booking agencies and players who thought they were through with the silversheet are back signing up fat contracts.

These are folks who know how to talk without sounding like train-announcers, and their former camera experience and the fact that they screen well, provides them with the background necessary. Among them is Robert Elliott, who made his picture debut with Bill Hart and drifted out when the screen began emphasizing sheiks, polished hair and collar-ad profiles. Elliott has now signed a fat contract with Fox.

Pauline Frederick is another who left Hollywood a few years ago when she and the bosses thought she was through and has now made a triumphant return via Vitaslipping when First National found he had been hiding a good voice all of these years and now his star is on the up-grade again.

Dr. Victor Parkin, consulting psychiatrist of the Los Angeles general hospital, has classified that peculiar mental condition so prevalent in Hollywood and which was burlesqued so well by King Vidor in "Show People." Parkin calls it "Phantasia Hollywoodi" but that's just another way of saying "swelled head" or, as they say in picture-land, "going Hollywood."

Charley Ray, Pola Negri, Mae Murray, Nazimova and hundreds of others, have been victims of the disease. Parkin says it is now less fatal to an actor's ambitions than his physical self. He describes it as a form of "mental alienation in which the victim lives in a world of fantasy."

MORTICIANS ENJOY DINNER MEETING

Members of District 10, Quintet Funeral Directors' Association, of which local funeral directors are members, enjoyed a dinner meeting at the General Denver Hotel, Wilmington, Wednesday night.

Speakers were: Harry J. Gilligan, Cincinnati, president of the National Funeral Directors' Association; Fred B. Handel, Youngstown, treasurer of the state association; J. L. Deming, secretary of the state association, and the Rev. Father Ertel of Wilmington. James E. McClure of Waynesville, district president, presided. Ralph M. Neeld and Miss Dorothy Neeld, Xenia; and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McMillan, Cedarville, were in attendance.

Bilious child suffers agony.

No more headaches and sickness.

Save your child from splitting headache and prostrating sickness. If the tongue is coated and breath unpleasant, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with constipated waste. Simply give a dose of "California Fig Syrup," and shortly after all the sour, irritating bile and fermenting undigested food will be moving from the bowels, leaving the system clean and sweet, and the child bright and strong.

"California Fig Syrup" suits child's system better than any harsh purging medicine, and they love its delicious taste. There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup. To be sure of getting the genuine, look for the name "California" on the package. —Adv.

LEGION TO CONDUCT ESSAY CONTEST IN HIGH SCHOOLS HERE

A gold medal will be awarded by Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, American Legion, to the winner of an essay contest being launched now among Xenia junior and senior high school pupils. It is announced by Paul Fuller, chairman of the publicity committee.

Junior and senior high pupils of Central, East and St. Bridget schools are eligible to compete in the contest, and should submit essays on the subject: "What Constitutes Good Citizenship?" before February 7, when the contest closes.

Contestants are advised that the essays must not be more than 500 words in length, must be written on one side of the paper only with inch margins on each side, must be folded neatly and submitted to the English teacher in their schools.

From these, the teacher will select the three best submitted from each class, which will be turned over to the Legion committee. The committee will code the essays and turn them over to judges yet to be selected. The close of the contest will be a feature of "Know the Legion Week."

Spelling, penmanship, neatness, and the age of the contestant will be considered by the judges in awarding the prize. Rules for the contest will be sent to the schools at once and contestants will be given pledges to attach to their essays, which will contain their name, age, class and school and guarantee that the manuscript was prepared by the pupil whose name is attached. The Legion committee will remove these pledges and code the essays by numbers before submitting them to the judges.

The essay contest will be made an annual feature of activities of Foody Post if present plans are carried out, it is announced. The Legion committee in charge is composed of Paul Fuller, chairman; Dr. H. C. Messenger, Paul B. Turnbull, Paul H. Creswell and Fire Chief William Hanftan.

EAST END NEWS

VALIDITY OF WILL CONTESTED HERE BY ATKINSON HEIRS

Suit contesting the validity of the will of the late Labon H. Atkinson, who died March 3, 1928, has been filed in Common Pleas Court by heirs of the estate.

Plaintiffs in the action are John R. Atkinson, Mary M. Cooper, Clarence Folkerth, as guardian of Jesse Folkerth and Elizabeth Folkerth, minors. The decedent was the father of John Atkinson and the grandfather of the other plaintiffs.

Atkinson, deceased.

It is charged that a paper purporting to be the last will of the decedent, dated January 7, 1928 and admitted to probate March 26, 1928, is not the actual last will. The plaintiffs ask that the document be declared invalid.

Miller and Finney are attorneys for the plaintiff.

OHIO INDUSTRIAL SITUATION GOOD SURVEY INDICATES

Capacity with forty-eight out of fifty-one independent open hearths manufacturing steel.

Wage disbursements are keeping in step with the production standard and are consistently high.

Akron, the rubber center of the world, also is riding on the crest of the industrial wave. Increased employment is noted throughout the industry and a large number of huge orders are anticipated shortly to supplement the present demand.

The volume of rubber sales last year was high, but peculiarly profits were low attributed to heavy losses suffered through collapse of crude rubber and subsequent slash in prices.

Cincinnati got off to a promising start the first of the year with noticeable increases in industrial lines. Increased activity is expected in the building with better weather.

Cold weather has retarded building trades in most of the larger cities, but this is expected to be overcome next Spring.

Reports of seventeen key plants are encouraging, disclosing an eleven and a half per cent increase for December and January over 1928.

Smaller cities also are reporting satisfactory progress in business and industry.

The outlook in Columbus is given in a statement issued by the chamber of commerce as follows:

"Universal prosperity of the metal trades industry has been particularly favorable to Columbus. There are approximately 18 per cent more people employed in manufacturing at the beginning of 1929 than last year.

"It is predicted that this percentage will be greater in the next thirty days when several new industries are started.

"Work on public improvements at this time is much greater than a year ago with new construction on crossing eliminations and other public works now in progress."

The "beauty diet" that made her ugly

SHE was one girl who was going to stay attractive—so she watched her "beauty diet." But, all the time, she was missing something every diet should have. In the dishes she so carefully selected there was scarcely any roughage. Constipation gained a foothold. Soon, her charm, her strength—the very youth she thought to protect—were paying the price!

Thousands of women and men are paying the price of soft, fibreless meals. Many are dieting—and yet they defeat their own purposes because constipation continues to poison the system. No other evil is more widespread. It may start with aching heads and blemished cheeks. It often ends with serious trouble and disease.

And more's the pity when it can be so easily prevented by means of a simple cereal. So quickly relieved. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring sure relief . . . safe prevention!

ALL-BRAN is 100% effective
ALL-BRAN is practically all roughage, or bulk. This bulk carries moisture throughout the digestive tract. Gently distending the intestines, sweeping out poisonous wastes. Part-bran products seldom contain enough bulk to be completely effective. Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN. It is 100% bran. It accomplishes results part-bran products cannot hope to equal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is infinitely better than habit-forming pills and laxatives. Use it in cooking too. Recipes on package. Mix it with hot cereals. Sprinkle it into soups. Just eat two tablespoonsfuls in some form daily—chronic cases, with every meal. Its regular use will protect your family from the dangers of constipation.

Insist on genuine Kellogg's, the original ALL-BRAN. Sold by all grocers. Served at hotels, restaurants, cafeterias. On diners. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Guaranteed!
Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.

MORTICIANS ENJOY DINNER MEETING

Members of District 10, Quintet Funeral Directors' Association, of which local funeral directors are members, enjoyed a dinner meeting at the General Denver Hotel, Wilmington, Wednesday night.

Speakers were: Harry J. Gilligan, Cincinnati, president of the National Funeral Directors' Association; Fred B. Handel, Youngstown, treasurer of the state association; J. L. Deming, secretary of the state association, and the Rev. Father Eitel of Wilmington. James E. McClure of Waynesville, district president, presided. Ralph M. Need, and Mrs. Dorothy Need, Xenia; and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McMullan, Cedarville, were in attendance.

Bilious child suffers agony.

No more headaches and sickness.

Save your child from splitting headache and prostrating sickness. If the tongue is coated and breath unpleasant, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with constipated waste. Simply give a dose of "California Fig Syrup," and shortly after all the sour, irritating bile and fermenting undigested food will be moving from the bowels, leaving the system clean and sweet, and the child bright and strong.

"California Fig Syrup" suits child's system better than any harsh purging medicine, and they love its delicious taste.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup. To be sure of getting the genuine, look for the name "California" on the package. —Adv. Hicks.

LEGION TO CONDUCT ESSAY CONTEST IN HIGH SCHOOLS HERE

A gold medal will be awarded by Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, American Legion, to the winner of an essay contest being launched now among Xenia Junior and senior high school pupils. It is announced by Paul Fuller, chairman of the publicity committee.

Junior and senior high pupils of Central, East and St. Bridget schools are eligible to compete in the contest, and should submit essays on the subject: "What constitutes Good Citizenship?" before February 7, when the contest closes.

Contestants are advised that the essays must not be more than 500 words in length, must be written on one side of the paper only with inch margins on each side, must be folded neatly and submitted to the English teacher in their schools.

From these the teacher will select the three best submitted from each class, which will be turned over to the Legion committee. The committee will code the essays and turn them over to judges yet to be selected. The close of the contest will be a feature of "Know the Legion Week."

Spelling, penmanship, neatness, and the age of the contestant will be considered by the judges in awarding the prize. Rules for the contest will be sent to the schools at once and contestants will be given pledges to attach to their essays, which will contain their name, age, class and school and guarantee that the manuscript was prepared by the pupil whose name is attached. The Legion committee will remove these pledges and code the essays by numbers before submitting them to the judges.

EAST END NEWS

Due to the inclement weather and illness the meeting of the Eureka Pleasure Club which was to have been held Friday evening has been postponed until the first Friday in February at which time it will meet at the home of Mrs. E. Hicks.

VALIDITY OF WILL CONTESTED HERE BY ATKINSON HEIRS

Suit contesting the validity of the will of the late Labon H. Atkinson, who died March 3, 1928, has been filed in Common Pleas Court by heirs of the estate.

Plaintiffs in the action are John R. Atkinson, Mary M. Cooper, Clarence Folkerth, as guardian of Jesse Folkerth and Elizabeth Folkerth, minors. The decedent was the father of John Atkinson and the grandfather of the other plaintiffs.

The following persons, all of whom are relatives, are named defendants: William Atkinson, Charles Atkinson, Nanette Devoe, Minnie Edson, Joseph Edson, Charles Atkinson, as guardian; Ruby Edson, Fessie Anderson, as guardian of Ruby Edson, and Charles Atkinson, as executor of the estate of Labon H. Atkinson, deceased.

It is charged that a paper purporting to be the last will of the decedent, dated January 7, 1928 and admitted to probate March 26, 1928, is not the actual last will. The plaintiffs ask that the document be declared invalid.

Miller and Finney are attorneys for the plaintiff.

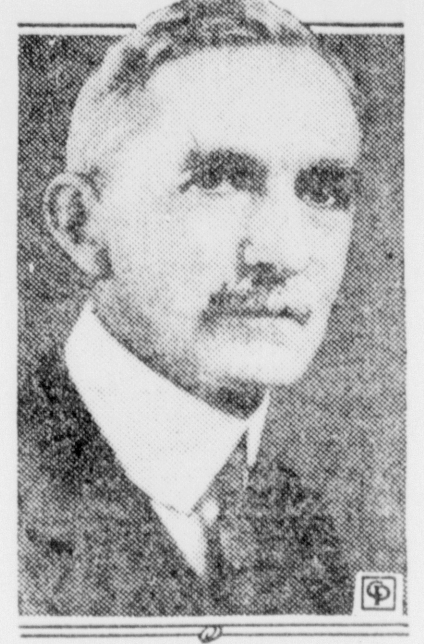

NAMED ADMINISTRATOR

Noah D. Shanahan has been appointed administrator of the estate of Mary Jane Shaffer, late of the village of Osborn, and has filed bond of $2,000 in Probate Court.

APPOINTED EXECUTOR

James W. Fudge, Charles N. Fudge and Ray S. Fudge have been named executors of the estate of John W. Fudge, late of Xenia city, without bond in Probate Court. Erle Huston, Ollie Spahr and Fred Fawcett have been appointed appraisers.

May Succeed Jardine

Frederick B. Mumford, dean of the college of agriculture, at the University of Missouri, is among those mentioned for the post of secretary of agriculture in President-elect Hoover's cabinet.

Capacity with forty-eight out of fifty-one independent open hearths manufacturing steel.

Wage disbursements are keeping in step with the production standard and are consistently high. Akron, the rubber center of the world, also is riding on the crest of the industrial wave. Increased employment is noted throughout the industry and a large number of huge orders are anticipated shortly to supplement the present demand.

The volume of rubber sales last year was high, but peculiarly profits were low attributed to heavy losses suffered through collapse of crude rubber and subsequent slash in prices.

Cincinnati got off to a promising start the first of the year with noticeable increases in industrial lines. Increased activity is expected in the building with better weather.

Cold weather has retarded building trades in most of the larger cities, but this is expected to be overcome next Spring.

Reports of seventeen key plants are encouraging, disclosing an eleven and a half per cent increase for December and January over 1928.

Smaller cities also are reporting satisfactory progress in business and industry.

The outlook in Columbus is given in a statement issued by the chamber of commerce as follows: "Universal prosperity of the metal trades industry has been particularly favorable to Columbus. There are approximately 18 per cent more people employed in manufacturing at the beginning of 1929 than last year.

"It is predicted that this percentage will be greater in the next thirty days when several new industries are started.

"Work on public improvements at this time is much greater than a year ago with new construction on crossing eliminations and other public works now in progress."

The "beauty diet" that made her ugly

SHE was one girl who was going to stay attractive—so she watched her "beauty diet." But, all the time, she was missing something every diet should have. In the dishes she so carefully selected there was scarcely any roughage. Constipation gained a foothold. Soon, her charm, her strength—the very youth she thought to protect—were paying the price!

Thousands of women and men are paying the price of soft, fibreless meals. Many are dieting—and yet they defeat their own purposes because constipation continues to poison the system. No other evil is more widespread. It may start with aching heads and blemished cheeks. It often ends with serious trouble and disease.

And more's the pity when it can be so easily prevented by means of a simple cereal. So quickly relieved. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring sure relief... safe prevention!

ALL-BRAN is 100% effective
ALL-BRAN is practically all roughage, or

Kellogg's
ALL-BRAN

bulk. This bulk carries moisture throughout the digestive tract. Gently distending the intestines, sweeping out poisonous wastes. Part-bran products seldom contain enough bulk to be completely effective. Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN. It is 100% bran. It accomplishes results part-bran products cannot hope to equal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is infinitely better than habit-forming pills and laxatives. To enjoy with milk or cream. Delicious with fruits or honey added.

Use it in cooking too. Recipes on package. Mix it with hot cereals. Sprinkle it into soups. Just eat two tablespoonfuls in some form daily—chronic cases, with every meal. Its regular use will protect your family from the dangers of constipation.

Insist on genuine Kellogg's, the original ALL-BRAN. Sold by all grocers. Served at hotels, restaurants, cafeterias. On diners. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Guaranteed!
Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.
